Switzerland Knows Earth's Greatest Hive Respect the Toad They Lost His Wife

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Because of political troubles in Italy, the powers may hold their next conference at Geneva instead of Genoa.

Let Americans, especially our mandlin "I love everybody" statesmen, study little Switzerland. She attacks no one, meddles with no one, but keeps herself always READY to fight in case of need—and everybody lets her alone. What Switzerland does we ought to do. With danger on every side, she keeps out of it, and we, with a wide ocean on each side, do not see our plain course.

Everyone knows something about the inside of a bee hive, where sexless working bees store honey, take care of the queen mother, murder the drones when their brief services are ended, settle, as they choose, the sex of each egg, etc.

Few know much about the complicated human hive. The biggest is called New York city. It has 2,541,421 creatures working for a living, 1,301,729 of them females. Unlike the bees, they work against each other instead of working together. They store up little, 99 in 100 live from day to day, and would starve in a week if they relied on savings.

Eleven thousand four hundred and ninety-nine of them are lawyers and judges, settling the fights of the others. Nearly ten thousand are doctors, attending to diseases, of which all, except old age, will one day be unknown and of which nine-tenths could be prevented now. Four thousand and eighty-four are clergymen, employed to rescue the millions from their sins; only seventeen of the clergy are women, which makes saving souls practically a masculine monopoly. Among nurses, there are 12,127 women to 409 men; about 200,000 are clerks, handing out goods—waste of numbers, there, it would seem. About 45,000 are chauffeurs, only 289 females. There are more than 10,000 policemen to look you up, a somewhat greater number of school teachers, that will gradually—in 100,000 years, perhaps—make policemen unnecessary.

A great mixed hive is a modern city, and the wonder is how it keeps going, how everybody gets his coffee and rolls every morning, how humbly and regularly those that get little out of it go about their duties—very much like workers in the hive.

There is no jewel in the toad's head, but every toad is worth more in cash while it lives than any two-karat diamond. Every year each toad devours insect pests that would, if undevoured, do $40.44 damage to some farmer. That is 5 per cent. a year on almost $1,000, and for that you can get a fair-sized "jewel." Yet very rare is the farmer's boy that does not kill a dozen toads every year, at least, to show what a "good shot" he is with stones.

The manager of a graveyard lost the body of a man's wife. It got mixed up in the busy days of the influenza in 1918, when the grave diggers went on strike. The body never was found, and there is no definite spot for Widower Solgrist to go and mourn, when so inclined.

The jury gave him $2,500 damages. It must have been hard to fix the amount exactly, men mourn so differently. Think of the thousands of millions of graves no longer marked on this earth. And some day, the earth itself, one big grave, will disintegrate and vanish. What then? Whom shall we sue?

President Harding has signed the co-operative marketing bill, allowing farmers, fruit growers, livestock raisers, dairymen, to combine for their own protection in marketing and fixing prices. The bill exempts farmers, etc., from provisions of the anti-trust laws. Well it might. There is a difference between conspiring to exploit the products of others and combining to market wisely and fairly what you actually produce.

Judge Landis, retiring from the bench, where his services are needed, should make the people realize that they pay their judges too little. What was good pay, enough to live decently, fifty or a hundred years ago, is miserable pay now. In England the brand of justice is excellent, on the whole, and judges are highly paid. Highly paid they should be here. Justice is worth having. Baseball may need ability to keep teams from selling games. But that is not important to the whole people.

NEW MOVE IN MAYOR'S 5-CT. FARE PROGRAM

Bill to Be Offered This Week by Rep. McCormick Is Now Being Drafted

Mayor Curley will file in the Legislature this week a bill asking for a repealing of the entire section of the passage of the Elevated Railway act of 1918.

The bill is in the process of being drafted and will be presented by Representative John W. McCormick of Ward 14, made up of parts of South Boston and Dorchester.

This is a new move in the Mayor's program in his fight for the restoration of the five-cent fare on the Elevated within city limits.

The only hope for a five-cent fare on the lines of the Boston Elevated Railway lies in the passage of additional legislation, which would provide for taxation to make up the difference in revenue that the slice in rates would bring about.

This statement was contained in a communication sent today by James F. Jackson, chairman of the board of trustees of the Elevated, to Walter R. Mains, president of the United Improvement Association.

The letter is a reply on the part of the trustees to questions and suggestions voiced by members of the association at a meeting with the trustees on January 26.

The immediate legal barrier to a lowering of the existing 10-cent fare, the chairman's letter stated, is the requirement that the cities and towns upon which the deficit of 1919 was assessed must be repaid the money advanced by them before fares can be reduced. This sum is given as $4,-393,52.

The letter pointed out that, while there is a demand for a building up of a more efficient traction system, fear

LOUISE GROODY

Greenwich, Ct., Feb. 20.—As a result of a romance that began in Paris, petite Louise Groody, leading lady of "Good Morning, Dearie," and William P. McGee, stock broker, were married here.

The ceremony was performed today, and the bride will resume her role on the stage in New York tonight.

The couple, each of whom was said to have been divorced, motored here from New York.

A short time ago Miss Groody was sued for alienation of affections by a Mrs. McGee.

At that time McGee, who has an office at No. 99 Broad street, New York, was quoted as denying the plaintiff was his wife. Newspaper records failed to disclose the outcome of the action.

CONVICTS' ESCAPE AT SAN QUENTIN BLOCKED

San Quentin, Cal., Feb. 20.—An attempt at delivery of convicts from San Quentin penitentiary was frustrated when authorities discovered a nearly completed tunnel from the machine shop in the jute mill to beyond the prison walls. William Clark, a convict, was found in the tunnel and guards stated that with the removal of two more feet of soft earth it would have been completed.

Pawtucket Officers Ordered to Fire If Crowd Attempted Further Advance

By Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 20.—The first disturbance in a week in connection with the textile strike occurred near the plant of the Jenckes Spinning Company here today. After four young women operatives had been intercepted by strike sympathizers, police officers drew clubs and drove back a crowd that was setting in toward the mill gates.

When the mob pressed to again the officers were commanded by Lieutenant of Police Ballon to discharge the riot guns with which they were armed if any further attempt to advance was made. The crowd fell back and did not threaten again.

Two men were arrested out of the mob. Several of those who were in the front ranks sustained bruised heads from the policemen's clubs.

The four young women, passing the Jenckes plant, were on their way to the J. & P. Coats, Ltd., mills nearby, at which there is no strike, when they were intercepted by sympathizers with the strike that is in effect at the Jenckes plant. The police said that assaults occurred in each instance and that because of the assaults they drew their clubs.

The two men arrested were Albert Perrigrin, 26 years old, and David Fortirra, 31, both residents of Central Falls. They were later arraigned in District Court on the charge of rioting and each was fined $20 and costs.

The Jenckes plant, according to policemen and pickets, is being operated by about the same number of persons as on Friday.

R. I. Strikers Refuse to Yield Any Point

By International News Service.

Providence, Feb. 20.—The striking textile workers of the Pawtucket Valley, when their representatives report to Governor San Souci's conciliation committee tomorrow, will refuse point blank to yield on any of the questions at issue, it was learned today.

They will demand, it was stated on best authority, that the forty-eight-hour week be restored, that the 10 per cent. wage reduction be repealed and that all the textile workers now on strike be taken back.

Recognition of the Amalgamated Textile Union of America by the mill owners will also be one of the demands of the operatives.

Balbait Men Released From Londonderry Escorted to Border by British Belfast, Feb. 20 (By the Associated Press).—Lieutenant Mead of the Royal Navy Service Corps was shot dead and a staff surgeon was seriously wounded as a result of an attack from ambush along a road near Dublin this afternoon.

Belfast, Feb. 20 (By the Associated Press).—The members of the Irish Republican Army football team, captured at Drompre last month, were released from the Londonderry jail this morning, in conformity with the order issued last night by Viscount Fitzalan, the Viceroy.

The released men were conveyed in motorcars across the Irish Free State border in Donegal by British troops. They were accompanied on the remainder of their journey by Commandant Shiels of Donegal, Sinn Fein liaison officer.

New Revolt Against Treaty by Troops

Dublin, Feb. 20 (By International News Service).—The second mutinous outbreak in the Irish Republican Army was reported from Tipperary. The South Tipperary brigade issued a proclamation similar to that of the Middle Limerick brigade on Saturday.

"The Irish Republican army is determined to rouse the nation from its lethargy to resist the treacherous inclusion of Ireland among British possessions," said the Tipperary proclamation.

Just before news was received of the Tipperary trouble the Ministry of Defence in the provisional government had announced that steps were being taken to prevent a repetition of the Limerick mutiny, when the recalcitrant brigade issued a proclamation the House Ways and Means Committee of the various proposals to raise funds for the soldiers' bonus will begin tomorrow, it was announced today by Representative Fordney of Michigan, the committee chairman.

HOUSE COMMITTEE TO HAVE BONUS BILL READY BY END OF WEEK

INSURANCE FEATURE IS IMPROVED

The sub-committee will take up the sales tax recommendations of President Harding and will discuss other suggestions, including direct taxation, re-enactment of the excess profits and the payment of a bonus through savings effected in military and naval expenditures.

The legislative and administrative draft of the soldier bonus bill was ratified finally today by Republican members of the committee. The final way plan, which includes cash payment, was adopted. Some changes were made in the legislation to make the insurance feature more attractive with the hope that a larger number of beneficiaries would take this form of the bonus.

The fight over ways of providing payment of the bonus seems to have narrowed down to a sales tax limited in its provisions to the actual amount of money necessary and as to the commodities to be taxed, and the plan of leaving the payment of the bonus to general treasury receipts.

Opponents of the sales tax say there are enough members of the Ways and Means Committee favoring a sales tax to write it into the legislation. Several Republican members of the House, including Mondell, are opposing any tax and urge that legislation be passed providing that the bonus shall be paid out of the revenues in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mondell is making a race for the senatorship in Wyoming. He does not wish to defend a sales tax in his campaign. With other members of the House he claims that sufficient moneys can be saved by cutting the army and navy and parring other appropriations to make up the first year payment of the bonus. The second year payment, which will be larger, he would leave to the future for consideration.

MASKED BANDITS STEAL WHISKEY WORTH $41,000

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 20.—Between 300 and 400 cases of whiskey, valued at $41,000, were stolen early today at the Oscar Pepper Distillery in Woodford County by twenty masked bandits who held up and tied to posts four guards and a passerby. The robbers are said to have headed for Cincinnati.

51 NEW INFLUENZA CASES ARE REPORTED

Fifty-one new influenza cases were reported to the Board of Health for the twenty-four-hour period ending at noon today. There were no deaths. This brings the total since January 1 to 1,168 cases, with nineteen deaths. Twelve new lobar pneumonia cases were reported today, with three deaths.

CALL FOR BONUS SUPPORTED BY THOUSANDS

Letters Are Received from All Quarters in Favor of Sales Tax

With thousands of signatures to the petition to Congress for action on the soldiers' bonus to be paid by a sales tax, and with hundreds of letters pouring into the Boston American office advocating the bonus, the public of New England leaves no question regarding its attitude on the matter.

The swift shift of legislative attitude in Congressional circles reflected this remarkable increase in the interest shown in the bonus by the general public.

Democratic Senators and Representatives who had been bitterly opposed to the suggestion of a sales tax have now reconsidered their stand and have come into the open with the announcement that they are for the tax plan provided the bonus plan is attached thereto.

USE "IDLE GOLD."

The letters advocating the bonus speak clearly on the gathering feeling that the former fighting man and his sister who went into the army or navy during the war are entitled to all that the country can do in the way of paying its debt to the veterans.

Says "E. F. S." of Dedham:

"Why fuss so much about the soldiers' bonus and where and how the money is to be raised with which to pay it? If we can brag, as we have done, about the amount of gold in the national treasury and how enormously rich this country is, why not take some of the gold and print enough currency to pay the bonus? I surely think the boys are worth it. What good is all that gold to anybody so long as it is idle?"

Harriet Ray Drane of No. 9 Summit avenue, Brookline, writes

"Any right minded, right thinking person in the United States, I am sure, feels that this country of ours should not lag behind other countries in giving a liberal bonus to the soldiers and sailors who entered the war. Other countries have long since paid their fighting men a bonus. We have delayed too long.

APPROVES SALES TAX.

"Permit me to say that I most heartily approve of the proposed sales tax plan for raising the needed money to pay this compensation."

Miss Drane's brother went overseas and remained in France and Germany for twenty-two months.

From Gardner, Mass., comes the following letter

"I am sending out a few lines to tell you about my discharge paper. I forwarded that paper to Washington. It was never noticed so far as I know. I was sent to Camp Devens in 1917 and was discharged there in 1919. I have appealed for the $100 bonus at the State House in Boston, but never have received it. Your friend, Leo Lamoureux."

American Legion officials in Massachusetts are preparing to throw their assistance to making the national campaign launched by the organization in opposition to the proposal to restore the excess profits tax as a method of raising the money for the bonus.

The Legion heads charge that this is a move to defeat the bonus altogether.

MERCURY AT 58, WARMEST FEB. 20 IN NINE YEARS

With the mercury standing at 58 degrees above zero at 10 a. m. today in the Weather Bureau thermometer, a humidity above 84 per cent., the snow was rapidly disappearing. Forecaster Smith said the warm wave would pass off tonight and two days of fair, cool weather would follow. At 4:30 p. m. the mercury stood at 60 degrees above zero, the highest on February 20 since 1912.

The lowest point the thermometer registered during the past twenty-four hours was 44 degrees at midnight. All New England is basking in Spring-like temperatures, the only point which reported frost during the night was Greenville, Me., where the mercury registered 28 degrees. An extremely cold weather is prevailing today in the upper Missouri valley and the Canadian Northwest. Moorehead, Minn., reported a temperature of 8 degrees below zero, Stevens are reported rising throughout Southern New England.

WALTHAM MAYOR SEEKS FUNDS FOR CITY HALL

Mayor George R. Beal, heading a delegation of Waltham city officials, appeared before the Legislative Committee on Municipal Finance today, seeking authority to borrow $1,100,000 outside of the debt limit for the erection of a city hall, community building, junior high school and branch library building. Representative Albert W. Bullock of Waltham presented a petition signed by 109 residents of the city, in opposition to the city hall project.

HELD FOR THEFTS FROM NAVAL Y. M. C. A. LOCKER

According to Bonner, Lyons has admitted several breaks in the lockers of the Naval Y. M. C. A., City square, Charlestown, and the theft of clothing. Bonner recovered overcoats valued at $300.

PETITION TO CONGRESS

For Action on Soldiers' Bonus With Sales Tax to Pay It

WE respectfully petition Congress to pass the soldiers' bonus act without further delay and also to levy a sales tax to obtain the money to pay the bonus, for the following reasons:

FIRST: Public opinion throughout the United States is undeniably in favor of the soldiers' bonus as shown by the decisive majority in every State in which a popular referendum has been taken: In Maine by 3 to 1; New Jersey by 3½ to 1; New York nearly 2 to 1; Rhode Island 8 to 1; Wisconsin 3 to 1; Oregon 2 to 1; Washington 2½ to 1, and so on.

SECOND: We believe that Congress if permitted to vote on the soldiers' bonus bill will favor it with even greater unanimity, regardless of party, than the popular majority by which the people in twenty-two States have already approved it; we believe that the soldiers' bonus cannot and ought not to be defeated and that the longer it is postponed, the greater the injustice.

THIRD: We believe the new tax scheme proposed by the Ways and Means Committee is only a little less objectionable than Secretary Mellon's proposal for three cent postage and for a new three-cents-a-gallon tax on gasoline. Proponents of such taxes oppose any soldiers' bonus whatever and hope by linking it with such new destructive and unpopular taxes to kill the proposition altogether.

FOURTH: If the soldiers' bonus is not only right, but inevitable, and if the United States is not to lag behind England, France, Italy, Canada and Australia, which have already paid liberal soldiers' bonuses, then our payment is already long overdue, not as a debt (for our debt to the soldiers can never be paid), but as a just tribute to the valor and the sacrifice of the men who won the war.

FIFTH: The only question that remains is: By what system of taxation shall the money be raised? Not by bond issues, because it is against the traditional policy of the United States to increase debt in time of peace. Not by any irritating, unreasonable or destructive tax on individuals, business or industry, because we already have too many such taxes. A small general sales tax will raise more than enough to pay the soldiers' bonus. It will bear heavily on no one. If the experience of Canada and our own Philippine Islands, where the sales tax is in operation, is repeated, the system will meet with such favor that it will become one of the approved methods of raising necessary revenue after the soldiers' bonus has been paid.

C. L. BURRILL ADVOCATES SALES TAX

Charles Lawrence Burrill, state treasurer from 1915 to 1920, and ranked among the leading financial experts of the city, announced today his unqualified stand for the soldiers' bonus coupled with the sales tax as advocated by the Boston American and other Hearst papers.

He declared that a bond issue to cover the cost of the bonus or the adjusted compensation would be neither advisable nor feasible at this time.

A large number of prominent Boston bankers, professional men, politicians and leaders in industry are daily joining the ranks of those who favor paying the bonus by a sales tax. Former Treasurer Burrill, who held office during the trying years of the war and its aftermath, said:

"The suffering of the boys who fought in Europe did not end when the armistice was declared. The nervous tension of day after day spent next to death in scores of horrible shapes does not wear off at once. It causes a mild shell shock that lingers indefinitely.

MADE SACRIFICE.

"One well-known officer tells me that he cannot hear the hum of an aeroplane any more without feeling a shudder creep over him, so awful are the memories connected in his mind with that noise. That sort of thing was what troubled Whittlesey and caused him to end his life.

"In going through the Parker Hill Hospital a few days ago I was immeasurably impressed with the suffering those lads are going through, and I decided that nothing would be too good for them.

"They made a wonderful fight for us 'over there,' and I, for one, am willing to pay twenty-five cents more for a cigar if that will make their lot any easier. They deserve the best treatment we can give them.

"I was present in my official capacity at the farewells given to the lads who left from Massachusetts, and I saw them go their way I determined that they should have all that was in my power to give them when they came back. They made their sacrifice for us, and it is only just that we should make our sacrifice for them.

SALES TAX IS EQUITABLE.

"I do not think that this country could float a bond issue strictly. It would lower the value of Liberty Bonds, which have already fallen uncomfortably below par, even after the promises of the speakers who sold them and agreed they would be all ways worth their face value.

"A sales tax would be equitable. It would not place a premium on financial stagnation as does the present system. It would raise the necessary sum as painlessly as is possible to raise such a huge amount. The sales tax is also much simpler than any of the other proposed taxes.

"The objection that the sales tax would be paid by the poor instead of the rich is ill-founded. All taxes are chiefly paid by the consumer either directly or indirectly. The sales tax merely does simply and directly what is now done indirectly.

"The poor buy less than the rich. Their tax will accordingly be less. Add to this the fact that the sales tax will not discourage business, and the poor will be much better off than if another system were adopted or bonds issued."

MacNIDER IN NEW BONUS APPEAL TO HARDING

Demands Pledges to War Veterans Be Kept; Raps "Ignorant" Foes of Bill

Washington, Feb. 20. — In a telegram to President Harding, Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion, again requested the President to keep the bonus pledges made to World War veterans. The Legion leader alleged that the opposition to the bonus springs from "ignorance of the cause and effect of the measure."

MacNider's telegram in part follows:

"The American Legion, speaking for nearly 3,000,000 returned service men and women and 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 more of their immediate families do not understand the first commitment and then retraction, ask that the package of the adjusted compensation bill be no longer delayed.

"Wherever and whenever the people of the United States have been given an opportunity to voice their feeling on this question their answer has been unmistakable. Had capital and labor been drafted when men's services were drafted, no such aggravated situation would not exist.

"Even if it was a question of reimbursing manufacturers for war contracts never fulfilled, requiring some $3,000,000,000, no such hue and cry was raised. It was an obligation and it was paid. There is an obligation no less just than that of the manufacturers, railroads and the shipping interests. Certainly their services were not so much more patriotic than that of the men who offered their lives.

"Should this whole generation and the next be made to feel that the country wants to penalize them for their service to their country during dangerous days?

"The American Legion, firmly believing that it is expressing the sentiment of the United States, asks that a committed administration allow the passage of what we believe to be the most constructive measure that can be devised. It is not a question of taxing down the service man's self-respect, it is a matter of saving the nation its own.

"(Signed) HANFORD MacNIDER."

Underhill Challenged to Bonus Debate

Indorsement of the sales tax as a means of raising money for the soldiers' adjusted compensation bill, was the chief feature of a speech by John J. Murphy to Somerville Post, No. 19, American Legion. Murphy was Democratic candidate for Mayor of Somerville at the last municipal election.

Murphy also took issue with Congressman Underhill's attitude on the bonus question, and declared that hundreds of millions of dollars saved by the "navy holiday" could be applied to assist in paying for soldiers' compensation. He also pointed to money saved by "retrenchment" in the personnel of the army and navy, the pruning in many government departments and money returned by the Shipping Board.

Murphy challenged Underhill to debate with him. Murphy took issue with the Congressman's statement that if the cash feature of the bill passed that in two years there would be three men out of work where there is now only one. Murphy claimed that the service men would spend the money given them and put it into circulation, thus starting the wheels of industry.

NO BILL FOUND ON HANOVER TRUST

Grand Jury Clears Chmielinski of Charges by Bank Commissioner

For the second time since the closing of the Hanover Trust Company by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen the Suffolk Grand Jury today returned no bill of indictment against the officers of the company.

The Grand Jury has been in special session since last Tuesday investigating charges of larceny brought by the office of Attorney-General J. Weston Allen against President Henry H. Chmielinski of the Hanover Trust Company.

The return of no bill brought to light, for the first time, against whom the prosecution was directed and the allegations.

The condition of the Hanover Trust Company was investigated by the Suffolk County Grand Jury more than a year ago and no bill was returned in January, 1921.

Four witnesses were examined at the sitting today. They were Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen, Directors Joseph Pistolino and Andrew DiPetro, and Bookkeeper Edward Merrill of the Hanover Trust Company.

The special session would have ended last week but for a petition in writing to the Grand Jury from President Chmielinski and Treasurer William S. McNary of the closed trust company, praying that they might be heard. Foreman Martin J. Ryan of the Grand Jury granted the petition and Friday and Saturday were given over to the defence. The procedure is not usual in Grand Jury hearings.

The Grand Jury reported shortly after the noon recess today to Judge Fessenden in the Superior Criminal Court.

The prosecution has been conducted by Assistant Attorneys-General Hurwitz and Goldberg.

SOCIETY WOMEN RUN HOTEL FOR A DAY

New York, Feb. 20.—Society women trooped this morning into the Biltmore to run the hotel for a day for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. They promptly became waitresses and room clerks, and also took possession of check rooms and news stands. One guest seemed a bit astonished when a head waitress took him by the arm, led him firmly to a table and assured him the "grub" was good and to wait on him. The attention cost him $5 in tips. The first newspaper sold for a dollar.

HELD FOR JURY ON AUTO THEFT CHARGE

Judge Sullivan in the Charlestown District Court today held John Fux, twenty-two years old, of Putnam street, Charlestown, in $3,000 bail for the March Grand Jury on charges of breaking and entering in the night time and the larceny of an automobile valued at $3,200 from the garage at No. 4 Warren street, Charlestown. The machine later was found abandoned in Everett.

Slain Director Had Quarrel With Woman, Says a Woman Informer

By International News Service.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 20.—A woman who claims to know of a bitter quarrel between a woman and William Desmond Taylor a few days before he was murdered was summoned to the district attorney's office today to tell her story, which was expected to furnish new clews in the investigation of the mysterious slaying.

Precautions were taken to keep the woman witness' identity secret, as she informed Chief Deputy District Attorney W. C. Doran she would not appear unless she was assured she would be shielded from publicity and that her name would not appear in connection with the investigation.

The woman told Doran that she knew both Taylor and the other woman, with whom, she said, he quarrelled several days before he was slain. The quarrel, according to the woman, occurred at Taylor's home and worried the director considerably.

SEEK DRUG ADDICT.

It was said that if the informant's story warranted the move, the other woman would be located immediately and questioned by District Attorney Woolwine.

While the woman's appearance at the District Attorney's office was awaited, police detectives were searching for a negro drug addict whom, they said, they will arrest on sight in connection with the investigation. Circumstances throwing suspicion on the negro, officers said, must be explained by him before he can be eliminated as the possible slayer.

The detectives declare that the negro for whom they were searching was not Henry Peavy, Taylor's valet-cook, who reports to the officers daily.

STORIES DISAGREE.

Investigators today endeavored to clear the discrepancy in the stories of Peavy and William Davis, chauffeur for Mabel Normand, on one hand, and George F. Arto, motion picture mechanic, on the other.

Arto asserts that he saw a third man with Peavy and Davis in front of the Taylor home shortly before the murder, while Peavey and Davis declare they were alone.

Sennett Charges Cands Holds Key to Mystery

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—"Find Sands and you will have found the slayer of William Desmond Taylor!"

Mack Sennett, movie director, whose "bathing beauties" won him fame in the land of films, so expressed his theory of the Taylor murder mystery, when he stopped at Chicago today on route to New York in company with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ince.

Informed that Los Angeles authorities had today announced the possible linking of the name of a prominent actress with the slaying, Sennett continued:

"That's impossible! I should as soon expect to see this building collapse as to think of anything like that."

"Everything points to a man as the slayer. The idea that a woman did it is ridiculous."

Taylor "Demobbed" at Halifax as a Captain

Fredericton, N. B., Feb. 20. — William Desmond Taylor, mysteriously murdered in California, returned from overseas active service with the British forces in May, 1919, according to information which reached Fredericton today.

Taylor came back with the rank of a captain in the British army and was demobilized as such. He made the return passage to America in the Baltic and landed at Halifax.

In discussions among officers at the table during parties in the dining room and also about the lounge and smoking room as to what a return to civilian life had in store for them, Taylor was quite talkative and confided to his fellow officers that he was going to the Pacific Coast as quickly as he could get there, saying he had a contract waiting him there at $30,000 a year.

Taylor told his fellow officers he had worked as a lumberjack as well as a miner on the Pacific Coast before he "dropped into the movie game."

ELINOR GLYN SAYS HOLLYWOOD IS NOT SO BLACK AS IT'S PAINTED

DEFENDS MOVIE STARS

By Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 20.—The following appeal for fair play to Hollywood and the motion picture industry was written especially for the Boston American by Elinor Glyn, the noted author.

By ELINOR GLYN.

America is supposedly a democracy. It had a magnificent start, its laws being framed at a time when the world had emerged into a fair state of civilization—and yet, as Mr. Brisbane frequently points out in his masterly leading articles, the most appalling cases of injustice, which would disgrace a corrupt autocracy, seem to be continually occurring.

One of the greatest is going on now.

It is the hysterical, illogical attack upon the moving picture community which was sprung forth as the aftermath of the tragic Taylor murder.

My sense of "cricket" won't let me remain silent about it any longer.

FIFTH LARGEST INDUSTRY.

The moving picture industry is, I am told, the fifth largest in America. It employs countless carpenters, electricians, painters, plumbers, artists, draftsmen, architects, designers, writers and musicians.

Probably the smallest number of its constituents are the actors and actresses—and only a fractional percentage of these are lurid figures who delight in scandalous exposure. But, the whole community is being held up to the English-speaking people of the earth as a rotten sore on the face of America.

Can anything be more unjust and illogical?

A mysterious murder is committed, and at once, like a flock of vultures, irresponsible reporters from the East swarm out to the coast and get colorful news to telegraph back to their centres.

HOW COULD THEY WORK?

They may individually be the kind-est-hearted beings, who would not hurt a fly, but they do not stop to think what harm they are doing to millions of their innocent countrymen and women when they spread hideous tales of dope fiends, pervert and other horrors too ugly to speak of, giving the impression, culled from perhaps one isolated and probably hugely exaggerated case, that every actor or actress whom the public has grown to love and admire on the screen, hides some grotesque vice in his or her palatial home, where orgies worse than those of Rome's decadence are supposed to occur nightly.

Now, use common sense and ask yourselves how could any business be done at all, how could pictures be made, how could work be accomplished, if even a large part of what is alleged were true?

SIFT DOWN TO FACTS.

Does Blanche cannot come up to time every morning on the set at 9 o'clock and do a hard day's work; drunken women and men, putrid with vice, cannot register on the screen for all eyes to testify, as beautiful, fresh young boys and girls. Directors cannot, month after month and year after year, put over dramatic action and control large companies of people if they are stupid and sodden with whiskey.

Use your intelligence, sharp-witted American public, and do not let scandal-mongers get by with all this nonsense. You are not softies to be gulled by freakish exaggerators. Sift the thing down to probable facts and your own intelligence will get at the truth.

I am a stranger who has watched this cinema world for over a year now. And they say that lookers-on see most of the game. It also is my habit to analyze and make psychological deductions and I tell you that while it is perfectly true that there does exist a minute minority of vicious people in the business, there are hundreds and thousands of good, honest, hard-working men, women and girls and boys. Children—even animals, whose livelihood is threatened by the slump which this ludicious attack upon the community at large may bring.

MRS. LEAVITT STILL HAS LOVE FOR HUSBAND

MRS. IRMA E. LEAVITT

Pretty twenty-year-old Mrs. Irma Estelle Leavitt of Rockland, who has brought a $10,000 alienation suit against 22-year-old Mrs. Alice C. Caldwell of Abington, alleging the latter has stolen the affections of her twenty-three-year-old husband, Richard C., still loves her errant "hubbie."

"The attractive young wife, surrounded by her parents and sisters in a modest home at No. 355 Webster street Rockland, said so to a Boston American interviewer.

"Yes, I still love him," declared the girl, who became the wife of young Leavitt when she was sixteen, following a whirlwind courtship during which young Mrs. Leavitt declares her husband was an ardent lover.

"But," and Mrs. Leavitt's face clouded, "despite my love for him I could never live with him again after what has happened. We could never be happy, or at least I couldn't with the spectre of another woman always looming up.

"I met Richard at a Good Templar meeting. He was my first fellow. We used to be simply crazy about each other. Then on September 23, 1919, when I was sixteen, we were married by Rev. Francis D. George. We were very happy.

WEARY OF MARRIAGE.

"After our marriage I still worked. We lived in Whitman for a while. And every week I turned over my earnings to him. Then one day I was sick. I came home here to mother for a visit, and the doctor said I had influenza. Richard didn't even come home with me. Finally in the evening I showed up with two girl friends of his. He knew it wasn't right to bring those girls into the house whether I was sick or well.

"He left for Whitman that same night with them. A few days later he returned, gathered a few of his personal effects, said he was sick of marriage and didn't want to see me again. Neighbors later told us that during this visit my husband, who, in fact, in short, they saw a woman pecking and tapping at the parlor window. This woman we know. We also know she heard every word that was said.

"We have not lived together since. My husband knew Mrs. Caldwell, both before and after marriage. He first became acquainted with her when he went to her house to play in an orchestra.

Mrs. William C. Wheeler, mother of Irma, believes young Leavitt is under some sort of hypnotic influence wielded by the alleged "other woman."

Meantime young Mrs. Leavitt continues as a boarder at the Caldwell home. He attended Kent's Hill Seminary in Maine and Vermont Academy in Vermont for short periods.

SEQUEL OF DIVORCE.

Mrs. Leavitt, an attractive brunette with sparkling blue eyes, revealed her shattered romance and had something to say about the "other woman," Mrs. Caldwell, who, she alleged, "stole" the affections of her husband.

The young wife told of her husband becoming a boarder at the home of Mrs. Caldwell in Abington, the latter's alleged influence upon him, and of the "spirit messages" which she alleges Mrs. Caldwell has said she has received.

The tangled marital troubles of the Leavitt-Caldwell families have caused a furore in Brockton, Abington, Whitman and Rockland, where the principals are well known. The alienation suit is a sequel of the sensational Caldwell divorce case a year ago.

Mrs. Caldwell sued her husband, Charles A., now of Rockland, for cruel and abusive treatment. The husband instituted cross action and named young Leavitt as co-respondent. Mrs. Caldwell was granted a divorce.

Then came Mrs. Leavitt's recent alienation suit. Followed a suit for divorce by Leavitt against his wife, alleging desertion. Came a cross action by her alleging the same.

DOES FAMILY WASH.

Of young Leavitt's reported activities in the role of lover of Mrs. Caldwell's home, where neighbors declare he has often done the family washing, whether Mrs. Caldwell be divorced or not, Mrs. Caldwell says:

"He certainly never offered to do any of these things for me. I can't understand why he should pick out a woman of Mrs. Caldwell's age. None of us can. It's a mystery. I can't help but believe he will soon tire of her. This whole thing isn't natural. But sometimes boys do do queer things."

Mrs. Caldwell, named in the alienation suit, is a spiritualist. Charges of hypnotism, spiritualism, necromancy and practice of occult power featured her divorce suit. They are expected to play a prominent part in the present triangle of suits.

MRS. CALDWELL IS BLAMED BY YOUNG WIFE

Woman She Charges With Alienation a "Spectre to Happiness," She Says

HEIRESS GIVEN FREE REIN BY McCORMICKS

Mathilde Trained to Choose Own Path, So Elderly Suitor Is Approved

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Friends of the McCormicks said today the family consent given to the engagement of Mathilde McCormick, sixteen years old, to Max Oser, a horseman of Zurich, Switzerland, was in line with the training of the children.

They always were given free rein in self expression, so long as their own whims and desires did not seriously interfere with their welfare. Muriel, at one time, demanded a separate apartment from the family in New York and the wish was granted. Later she decided to live in a hotel and there was no objection.

Mathilde's desire to live abroad even after there was no longer need for it, so far as her health was concerned, met with no opposition from the family, it was said.

Oser must become an American citizen if he weds Miss McCormick. This stipulation has been imposed, it is understood, by John D. Rockefeller as the only basis upon which he would consent to the marriage of his granddaughter.

"Max Oser's right name is Max Von Der Muehl," E. L. Burgy, his cousin, said today. "His father was a German nobleman, Count Von Der Muehl. His widowed mother married Sebastian Oser after Sebastian returned to Switzerland from America in 1865. Max Oser is fifty-seven.

"Sebastian Oser came to this country about the time of the Civil War. He worked first as a lumberjack in Northern Wisconsin, and then spent several years as a deckhand and levee worker up and down the Mississippi. Finally reaching New Orleans, he acquired a small interest in a cotton concern and after a few years retired with a fortune estimated at $2,000,000 and returned to Switzerland.

"Whether all of this fortune was inherited by Max Oser or whether it was divided among numerous relatives after Sebastian Oser's death, is not known here.

'SALOME' MAY BE BARRED FROM PITTSBURGH

Conservatives Behind Clergy in Move to Head Off Mary Garden

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20.—Whether Mary Garden and "Salome" are going to get by in puritanical Pittsburgh early in March seemed in doubt today. Miss Garden is booked to put on this opera here, and unless police tone it down she is scheduled to give her regular version, too.

Part of the more conservative element in Pittsburgh is behind the clergy to head off Mary and "Salome." Rev. Daniel L. Marsh, pastor of the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church, for a century familiarly known as "Old Brimstone," leaves for Chicago today to ascertain how folks in Chicago are impressed by this production.

It is probable that a committee from the Pittsburgh Ministerial Association will visit Director of Public Safety George W. McCandless' office today and ask him summarily to prohibit Miss Garden from presenting the opera here.

BISHOP SAYS VOLSTEAD LAW WAS A "MISTAKE"

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, president of the National Council of the Episcopal Church, said in an address here that he believed "the eighteenth amendment was a mistake." He also said that he believed in the modification of the Volstead law. "I am in favor of morality," he said, "and I personally observe the Volstead law, but I am opposed to putting sumptuary laws of a drastic character in the constitution. It partakes of the old philosophy that matter is inherently evil. I am not speaking in the interests of the underworld, but in the interests of intelligent, upstanding men."

SISTERS CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS SEATS

Ashland, Neb., Feb. 20.—Probably for the first time in history of American suffrage, two sisters are candidates for Congress this year. They are Mrs. Irene C. Buell, city prosecutor of Ashland, and Mrs. A. K. Gault, Mayor of St. Peter, Minn.

SHIP MISSING IN GALE-SWEPT SEA IS SAFE

Boston Schooner Bradford E. Jones Reported at Virgin Islands

The four-masted schooner Bradford E. Jones, which put out of Provincetown Harbor, January 21, for Portland, Me., and which had been given up for lost with her crew of twelve men, is safe at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. The information was conveyed to Mrs. John Allen of No. 77 Washington avenue, Waltham, wife of Captain Allen of the schooner, in a telegram today.

The schooner sailed from Philadelphia for Portland early in January with 2,500 tons of coal. She encountered gales, and finally put into Provincetown to repair sails and rigging and to take on provisions.

WINSHIP TO BUILD 37 HOUSES IN WAKEFIELD

Charles N. Winship, president of Winship Boit & Company, Harvard knitting mills, announced today that he would build 37 houses in Wakefield this Spring. Work on the houses is expected to start about March 1. Winship has purchased twenty acres of land in the town section. Selectmen have promised co-operation in the matter of light and water and street construction. The houses will be offered for sale or rent to the general public and will not be confined to employes of the company.

It didn't look as though prohibition was in effect from the docket in Roxbury court today. Judge Timothy J. Ahearn disposed of the cases of fifty-nine men charged with drunkenness.

17 MEN ARE OVERCOME IN WALL STREET FIRE

New York, Feb. 20.—Fifteen firemen, two watchmen and "Rex," the engine company's dog, were overcome by monoxide fumes while fighting a fire in a fifteen-thirty-story storeroom in the thirty-story building at No. 60 Wall street early today. The fire started in the brokerage offices of Henry L. Doherty & Co. It was quickly controlled, but it took physicians several minutes to bring some of the firemen around.

URGES ATTENDANCE AT ASYLUM BILL HEARING

Dr. George W. Galvin today issued a statement appealing to the people of Massachusetts to attend the hearing to be held in Room No. 446 of the State House, tomorrow on two bills pending before the General Court.

The first would stop the censoring of persons' letters from inmates in sanitariums and private hospitals and the second provides that no person shall be committed to any institution without reasonable notice and the right of trial by jury.

WINTHROP POLICE SEEK MAN 18 DAYS MISSING

Police of Winthrop and surrounding towns were searching today for Joseph Pimentelli, forty-two years old, missing since he left his home in Winthrop February 2, with the announcement he was going to visit his brother Rev. A. J. Pimentelli, pastor of St. John's Catholic Church of Cambridge. The police said the missing man went to the Columbia Trust Company in East Boston and drew out his savings.

FUNERAL OF W. H. HALL ATTENDED BY NOTABLES

South Wilmington, Ct., Feb. 20.—The funeral of Colonel William Hall, who died in Florida, was held here today and attended by a notable gathering of men in public life. Prayers were conducted at the home by Rev. Earl W. Darrow, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hingham. Later at the church services Rev. Dr. William Arnold Shanklin, president of Wesleyan University, delivered a eulogy.

RESCUE WOMAN INVALID AT CAMBRIDGE FIRE

Following the escape of occupants of the three-story dwelling house at No. 19 Harvard street, Cambridge, firemen put up a ladder and brought to safety Mrs. Mary Kirchner, who was sick in bed on the third floor. The smoke drove five families to the street. The cause of the fire is not known.

EFFORTS TO END STRIKE MADE IN LOWELL

and the agents of the Hamilton Manufacturing Corporation and the Bay State Cotton Corporation, whose operatives are on strike, was the only new feature in the textile strike situation here today.

Efforts are being made to bring the agents and the strikers together in an attempt to clear up the situation. The mills have at no time made it clear to the men why the 20 per cent. cut in wages was necessary, and if it be believed in many quarters that if the cut could be reduced from 20 to 10 per cent. the operatives would be willing to go half way to meet the employers.

The Hamilton Mill was still closed today, while the Bay State continued working, but without the loom fixers.

Waltham Weavers Are Back at Work

One thousand employes of the Boston Manufacturing Company of Waltham returned to work today after a strike of 200 weavers Friday afternoon had fizzled out, following the action of the company management in closing down the plant Saturday morning and announcing that the workers would have only one more opportunity of returning to work.

The action of the workers accepts the 20 per cent. cut in all wages announced by the company.

Red Flags Carried in Central Falls Parade

Central Falls, R. I., Feb. 20.—Close upon the heels of a narrowly-averted outbreak at Pawtucket today five hundred strikers from the mills of the United States Finishing Company here started a parade through the main streets of this city and Pawtucket, two red flags appearing at the head of the procession.

There was no interference with the parade, although the police sent a detail to maintain order.

Women Strikers Stone Trucks at Natick, R. I.

Natick, R. I., Feb. 20.—Women textile strikers stoned four trucks here today when an attempt was made to remove a quantity of cloth from the railroad station to the Pontiac bleacheries.

WANTS CRUISERS MADE AIRPLANE CARRIERS

Washington, Feb. 20.—Conversion of the hulls of two battle cruisers now building into the latest type of airplane carriers was advocated today before the House Naval Affairs Committee by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt. He pointed out that the $13,000,000 conversion was authorized under the Naval Treaty and that a large saving could be effected if the cruiser hulls were used as airplane carriers instead of being scrapped entirely.

JOBLESS MAN SLAYS CONDUCTOR, GETS $2.36

Washington, Feb. 20.—Driven to desperation by his failure to secure a job and inability to provide for four little children, Paul Daverral Barry, twenty-eight years old, today shot and killed Tyler R. Lawler, a street car conductor and then surrendered to the police. His loot amounted to $2.36.

Miss Annie Kranik of No. 28 Bradford street, South End, who told the police Saturday she had been one of the principal figures in a little revival of the old "waiting at the church" comedy, today appeared in Municipal Court and swore out a warrant for the arrest of George Jakimchuk of No. 9 Wall street, West End.

Jakimchuk, she said, was to have married her Saturday. Just before the hour set for the wedding, she said, he borrowed $110 from her to pay the final instalments on the furniture and promised to return in time for the wedding.

The guests assembled, the wedding dinner was spread and the minister had arrived, she continued, but Jakimchuk failed to appear. When the week-end passed without any sign of him she tired of waiting and notified the police, who want him on a charge of larceny of the furniture money.

SAYS BERGDOLL LOST RIGHTS AS CITIZEN

Washington, Feb. 20.—Declaring that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll lost his rights as an American citizen by his conviction as a draft dodger, Colonel Thomas Miller, alien property custodian, today attacked the right of Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, Grover's mother, to recover property valued at $750,000 seized from her son under the trading with the enemy act.

Miller filed an answer in the District Supreme Court to the petition of Mrs. Bergdoll to secure the return of the property.

SAYS WASHINGTON READ SERMONS TO HIS WIFE

"George Washington spent Sunday evenings in reading sermons to his wife," said Rev. Dr. Edward C. Cotton of Boston in his address at King's Chapel today. "Washington," he said, "manifested the Christian spirit in a practical way. Religion and morality ought to be the property of every one who holds a responsible place in the affairs of the country."

In the language of The American's "Lost and Found" column there's no such word as "fail." When you are the loser put this successful finder to work for you.

DORCHESTER GIRL TO WED SON OF CONSUL

The engagement of Charles F. Flamand of No. 17 Shepard street, Cambridge, son of J. C. Joseph Flamand, French consul in Boston, and Miss Helen McVey of No. 200 Hancock street, Dorchester, daughter of Adolphus McVey, became public today with the filing of the marriage intention at the City Hall. Flamand was born in France twenty-nine years ago and has been in the insurance business in Boston. His mother was Miss Elizabeth Malley of Lawrence.

FORMER SOMERVILLE MAN DEAD IN WEST

Chief of Police Kendall of Somerville today received word from Carlinville, Ill., that a middle-aged man who had given the name of Herbert M. Stevens and Somerville as his home city, died in Carlinville Hospital last Friday. The sheriff's communication stated that Stevens had been taken ill when he entered the police station asking for shelter. Stevens said he had left Somerville nearly thirty years ago. Chief Kendall is searching for relatives.

PROVIDENCE GIRL FINDS MAN ROBBING STORE

Providence, Feb. 20.—Little Josephine Slaiman, the daughter of S. N. Slaiman, proprietor of a store on South Main street, discovered a robber crouching behind a pile of women's coats which he had stacked up to pass to a confederate. She called to her father, who advanced on the man. The thief covered Slaiman with a gun and backed out of the store. Patrolman Farrelly saw the thief, but the latter jumped a fence and escaped.

MATERNITY AID FAVORED BY DR. KELLEY

Many Women at State House for Hearing on Accepting Shepard-Towner Bill

"Between 600 and 700 women die in childbirth every year in Massachusetts," said Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, State Commissioner of Public Health, today in advocating acceptance of the Shepard-Towner bill, which provides for maternity benefits.

Hundreds of women from all parts of the State flocked to the State House today to support or oppose acceptance of the act when the measure came before the legislature Committee on Public Health and Social Welfare.

Dr. Kelley said: "I have always opposed the paying of cash to mothers and expectant mothers, but we believe that by purely educational methods much good can be accomplished.

STATE TAXED, ANYWAY.

"This department has recommended the provisions of the Shepard-Towner bill first of all because it is a question of expediency pure and simple and not because any member of the department is an advocate of Federal subsidy.

"Another reason for recommending it is because the State is taxed, anyway.

"The question is one of local public welfare. There is not a State in this Union so poor that it ought not be able to do its share in this matter of public health. To accept the act and not appropriate any money would be a piker's game, to say the least.

"The other thing we can do is to accept the act as it is and we would then get enough money to carry on a stimulative campaign. We can do that by making an additional appropriation of $15,000."

FIELD FAVORS AID.

Elias Field, speaking in favor of the bill, said: "The only question here is whether Massachusetts, being obliged to pay its part of the Federal taxation towards carrying the appropriation involved in that bill, is to take the position that the work done by our Board of Health now with the appropriation of $16,000 is all we want to do, and that we refuse to accept assistance from the Federal government, when that is purely getting your own local State Boards of Health money to carry out the plans of your Board of Health.

"The bill has been accepted by twenty-seven States, and I believe that all the other States will accept, whether Massachusetts does or not."

Robert Kelso, president of the National Conference of Social Work, said: "The question of getting the right information into the home is a living question of public welfare. Massachusetts standards are looked to by other States."

Dr. Robert De Normandie declared: "If we accept this Shepard-Towner act, the money that comes to us, I am perfectly sure, will go to help educating the people."

Others to speak in favor of the bill were Dr. E. H. Bigelow of Framingham, Miss Sarah Fisher of Falmouth, Dr. Alice Hamilton of Harvard Medical School, Henry Sterling, American Federation of Labor; Mrs. Sumner Whitten of Holyoke and Mrs. Anna C. Tillinghast of the Republican State Committee.

Fresh From Paris

Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

PARIS, France.

DOUILLET meets the oncoming Spring with a unique combination of blue serge and green leather. The bodice has a way with its collar—Spring bodices are having collars, Paris tells us, and Paris is finding exceptional things to do with them. First, it is a standing collar, turned over, and afterward it is a pair of wide revers, with a little organdie vestee behind them. Half-way down, the bodice begins to be corded, perpendicularly, and the green leather belt at the foot of the cording is embroidered in silver and nickel nail heads. The skirt is in two panels that overlap each other and are cut in a slanting line at the bottom so that they end in points at opposite sides of the hem.

THE three-piece costume excels itself as its vogue increases. Jean Patou makes one of black crepe marocain and trims its coat pleatings resembling fans. The sleeves of this coat are really not sleeves at all, but are open extensions that lie over the arms, wrist deep. The blouse and coat lining are of cerise and white silk and the coat collar is of the crepe, puffily gathered.

SACCO, VANZETTI TRIAL COST $28,648

Norfolk County Treasurer Lists Expenses in Braintree Slaying

Norfolk County paid $28,648.76 due to the trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolmeo Vanzetti, who were convicted of the murder of Paymaster Fred Parmenter in South Braintree.

The costs of the trial and the investigations preceding the trial were made public today by County Treasurer F. C. Cobb.

The largest single item of expense was the drawing and examination of 675 talesmen to select a jury.

The salaries paid to the jury during the seven weeks the trial was on at Dedham totalled $2,395.24. Special guards cost the county $1,850, and meals for the jury came to $2,760.50.

It cost $351.40 to entertain the jury at the Black Rock House, Nantasket, one hot Sunday.

A further extension of time until February 25 for completing the bill of exceptions taken by counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti has been obtained, it was said at the offices of defence counsel today. The first part of the bill is entile in Dedham.

SOUTH BOSTON MAN HELD AFTER MOTT ST. HOLDUP

Edward Walsh, twenty years old, of South Boston, appeared in Municipal Court today to answer a charge of robbery in connection with the holdup of George H. Handy of No. 253 Broadway, South End, who was robbed of two checks totalling $250 last night by four men. Handy, who identified Walsh as one of the men, said that the four had volunteered to slow him the way to Rollins street, when he asked them its location, and had robbed him on Mott street. The case was continued until tomorrow.

PRIEST CATCHES MAN AT SAFE IN VESTRY

Providence, Feb. 20.—Caught in the act of attempting to rifle the safe in the vestry of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Smith street, by the Rev. Martin F. Reddy, pastor of the church, a burglar giving the name of Charles Benson, thirty-nine years old, of Ridley Park, Philadelphia, is under arrest here.

The man had on his person a diplomas certifying to the successful completion of a course in burglary at a San Francisco school and also a book of instructions on opening a safe.

MOTHER!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels in a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN ROUGH CHAPPED HANDS

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose-water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and clear the skin, also to keep a fair, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.—Advertisement.

TO MOXIE RETAIL DEALERS, Everywhere:

If you are not being served promptly, please communicate with us at once. One of the conditions we insist upon, in taking on Moxie Jobbers, is that they shall be alert to the needs and requirements of the Moxie Retail Dealer. To be a Moxie Jobber is much sought after. We have a very large waiting list.

While a Moxie Jobber has no exclusive territory, it is far from our intention to add any more Jobbers to a district than are required to give the dealer One Hundred Per Cent Service.

As evidence of the high character of our Moxie Jobbers, we will say that the combined financial rating of our Moxie Jobbing Agents in New England alone is more than One Hundred Million Dollars ($100,000,000.00). Their combined employes, who are looking after Moxie interests, number many, many hundreds.

These Moxie Jobbers have storage, trucks, and other facilities to give you every attention, and it is a pleasure for them to serve you. In fact, you will find Moxie Jobbers are practically One Hundred Per Cent perfect. The complaints we have received so far in 1922 are less than 1-1000th of one per cent for lack of Service.

In view of the fact that the present Moxie Display is of short duration, may we suggest that you get in touch with your Moxie Jobber at once, and sign as required to give the dealer One Hundred Per Cent Service.

If there is any possible way in which we can serve you, please communicate with us.

3 ARRESTED ON DRUG CHARGE AT MANCHESTER

Cocaine Supply Found in Auto Occupied by Two Boston Men and Woman

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 20.—Max Winstein, Joseph Levine and Anna Magee, all of Boston, were arrested for illegally possessing several hundred dollars' worth of cocaine.

The automobile in which they are said to have transported the "dope" was seized by police working with Federal narcotic agents.

Winstein and Levine are well-known to the authorities of Boston, both being under Federal indictment for peddling drugs.

Winstein pleaded guilty to peddling "dope" a few days ago and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Winstein said he agreed to plead guilty on condition he be punished by a small fine, but when United States Judge Morton sentenced him to prison he asked to change his plea. This was granted.

For several weeks the police of Manchester have been tracing the source of cocaine and morphine sold here, and with the arrest of the trio they believe they have found the source.

The police are looking for a pedlar in Manchester, believed to have been connected with the drug-smuggling operating between Canada and Boston and Manchester.

NEW ONTARIO FIGHT TO EXTRADITE NEGRO

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 20.—A legal battle rivalling, if not eclipsing, that of a few weeks ago in which Matthew Bullock, American negro, won his fight against extradition to Norlina, N. C., is predicted in local court next Friday, when the North Carolina authorities will make a second attempt to have Bullock turned over to them. Negroes of Hamilton are organizing to provide a defence fund. Norlina authorities now seek the negro's extradition on a charge of attempted murder growing out of race riots several months ago which resulted in the lynching of Bullock's brother.

A. F. FITZPATRICK OF EAST BOSTON IS DEAD

Giblin is arranging a benefit performance at an East Boston moving picture theatre for the aid of the family.

MOVE TO UNIONIZE ACTORS OF ENGLAND

New York, Feb. 20.—Further invasions into American theatrical fields of non-union British actors may be prevented, Samuel Gompers told the Actors' Equity Association, if Equity leaders will go to England and recognize the British Actors' Association. Mr. Gompers suggested that reorganization of British actors would thwart any plans producing managers in the United States might have to use foreign talent in a fight against the Equity members after the expiration of the present contract in 1924.

BURGLARS TRAPPED IN HAVERHILL ESCAPE

Haverhill, Feb. 20.—Police are searching for four young men who were surprised while attempting to rob the Trio Clothing Company store on Washington street, Albert Zeiler, the proprietor, entered the store, and the quartet jumped from behind a counter and made a dash for the cellar. When policemen arrived the men had escaped. On the floor the officers found a coat, hat and letter. Police believe the same men broke into a second-hand store on Water street and stole several hundred dollars' worth of clothing.

IRISH TO FIX LOW TARIFF, SAYS BLYTHE

Americans Desiring to Open Manufacturing Plants Will Be Welcomed

(This is the fifth article of the series by Robert J. Prew on present conditions in Ireland based on his personal observations and investigations during a tour of the country.)

By ROBERT J. PREW.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

(Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service.)

Dublin, Feb. 20.—"We shall build no high tariff wall against the exports to Ireland of any nation. Such tariffs as it may be necessary to impose will be fixed as low as may be consistent with the promotion and protection of industries for which this country is peculiarly fitted."

In these terms Ernest Blythe, minister of trade and commerce in the Irish provisional government, outlined to me the fiscal policy of the Free State.

Regarding the official attitude towards foreign enterprise in Ireland, he said: "Manufacturers of any country desiring to come here and establish their own plants will be given a fair field, and there will be no discrimination against them. Americans particularly will be welcomed. We shall, however, bar out all kinds of monopolizing enterprises; we shall certainly forbid the creation of trusts wherever they might operate against Irish manufacturers and producers and against the interests of our people."

BLYTHE BROAD-MINDED.

Mr. Blythe is typical of the young Irishmen who now have control of the affairs of their country—alert, hard working, broad-minded, eager for information and ready to give consideration to all practical suggestions. In the course of a long discussion of the economic prospect opening up before the new State, he showed clearly that the intense racialism of the Irish people is not going to be allowed to militate against the country's prosperity.

Mr. Blythe is not impressed with the possibility of any considerable growth of direct trade relations between this country and the United States. This attitude is naturally due to the realization that Ireland is essentially an agricultural country, and that as such she has little to send to American that America needs. Linen goods from the North of Ireland are an exception to this rule but there is a general feeling in Ireland that this trade has reached its peak, and that linen has no great future.

American goods will be admitted here on fair terms, but such imports will be closely watched, and, wherever necessary, action will be taken to protect ancient Irish industries.

BIG TRADE WITH ENGLAND.

"The outstanding fact in our economic situation," said Mr. Blythe, "is that more than 93 per cent. of our trade is done with England, and I do not see any reason to believe that this proposition will be materially altered in the future. Therefore, in building our tariff policy we have to consider almost entirely its reaction on Anglo-Irish trade.

"We have a fair measure of fiscal freedom under the treaty, but it is naturally limited by the force of unmistakable economic facts. We can have nothing to do with high protection or tariffs for revenue only, for the simple reason that we are not in a position to invite retaliation by England.

"While the treaty negotiations were in progress in London we established a committee of economic experts to advise our delegates on trade policy. Some of its recommendations were undoubtedly adopted by the delegates and passed on to the British government in the form of verbal pledges or request.

AD VALOREM DUTY.

"For instance, under the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of 1889, the Egyptian government is at liberty to impose an ad valorem duty of 15 per cent. on a special schedule of imports. We may employ a similar device for the development of our industries, adopting an ad valorem tariff ranging from 5 to 10 per cent. This would enable our manufacturers and producers to compete on fair terms with those of England and other countries whose industries are already built up and are operated on an efficient basis."

The Minister of Trade instanced several branches of commercial activity to show how this policy would work out. He said:

"Almost always you will find that our industries are linked with the soil, and those are the ones that we are out chiefly to foster. Ireland must import foreign wheat, but half of the flour we use is milled in America or Liverpool. We ought to do all our own milling, and a small duty on flour is necessary to promote the Irish milling industry.

"The tanning industry is another yet more obvious direction in which we ought to expand. We ship a lot of our hides to America to be tanned, where we ought to treat them ourselves and produce our own leather as far as we can; some form of government aid is necessary here.

PACKING PLANT IDLE.

Mr. Blythe is satisfied that there is ample capital in Ireland for the financing of the country's immediate needs. "We have nearly a billion dollars on deposit in our banks," he said, "and now that the country has peace this money will seek employment."

COLLINS FEARS COLLAPSE OF TREATY

Collins Fears Defeat of Anglo-Irish Treaty

By HAYDEN TALBOT,
Universal Service Special Correspondent.

Dublin, Feb. 20.—"There is no doubt that the treaty opponents will have a majority in the Ard Fheis, Tuesday, but before any vote is taken I am going to make a present to that majority and ask them what they are going to do with it."

Michael Collins made this answer to my question regarding his opinion of the result of the meeting of 2,500 representatives of Sinn Fein clubs from all Ireland. I met Collins at the Dublin City Hall where he and his staff were hard at work until almost midnight.

Hardly less important than this statement by Collins was his laugh of unconcern as he spoke.

Collins' manner bore out the report which reached me from an authoritative source, that Collins a few days ago cornered Harry Boland and demanded to know why the followers of De Valera did not put an end to the cause of their troubles—himself.

"You know that I am the pulse of the movement to establish the Irish Free State," Collins said to Boland. "If you and De Valera have the courage of your convictions, why not kill me?

"Surely De Valera and the others on your side, realize that the important thing to do if you want to get at the root of any trouble is to find the central nerve tissue and destroy it. You all know that all opposition worthy of the name would cease if you destroyed me, and if your charges are true I am subverting the republic and you have every right to put me out of the way.

"Surely it is not possible that you are afraid to do it?"

When I repeated this report to Collins he did not deny its truth, but merely smiled the broader.

ADMITS HUGE MAJORITY.

As far as I am able to judge the chairman of the provisional government is prepared to see at any moment the collapse of the whole treaty movement, hemmed in as he is by bitter antagonism on the part of his former associates.

"Your information," he continued, "regarding De Valera's having won the northern delegates is undoubtedly correct. From Cork and Kerry, excepting from my own constituency in South Cork, the delegates are virtually unanimous in favor of the Republic.

"There are 620 votes in these groups alone. Assume that the treaty supporters number as many. That makes 1,240 votes out of a total of 2,500. Of the balance a large majority are instructed to vote down the treaty resolution.

"You are also right in your prediction, that however the vote goes, it means inevitably the end of Sinn Fein.

FEARS ULSTER OUTBREAK.

"More important than anything else is the effect that this news will have in Belfast and in Ulster generally. Nobody should be deceived by the week-end calm there. The moment that the mad men who are in out-and-out control in all parts of Ulster learn of this latest split in our side, they will undoubtedly begin a new campaign of intensified slaughter.

FATHER SAVED FROM JAIL BY POLICEMAN

Judge Heeds Appeal, Gives Somerville Man Another Chance

The intercession of Patrolman Peter Moore of Somerville today saved Costos Stefanos of No. 74 Linwood street, Somerville, from a three months' jail term, and prevented his wife and four children from facing destitution, which would have followed imposition of the sentence.

Stefanos was in court January 12 and was fined $50 for illegally keeping and exposing intoxicating liquors for sale. He was given an extension of time to pay, and on his failure to pay today was summoned before Judge Sartevant.

Stefanos, unable to speak much English, could not offer any explanation to the court, and the judge was about to send him to jail.

Patrolman Moore, who was in the courtroom on another matter, asked Judge Sturtevant to withhold sentence. He told the court that Stefanos was poor, that his wife had recently undergone an operation and that he had four small children. To send the man to jail would deprive them of support.

Judge Sturtevant continued the case another month, to give Stefanos another chance to pay.

COLUMBIA BOYS STIR VILLAGE IN CLASS ROW

10 Students Held by Police After Sophomores Tie Up 40 Freshmen

New York, Feb. 20.—A class scrap of the most successful magnitude, which lasted most of the night, left a mixed assortment of ten Columbia University sophomores and freshmen in the hands of the Lynbrook, L. I., police today.

The police force of the village, consisting of four patrolmen, is in a somewhat battered state, the fire department is totally exhausted from hose playing and a heretofore perfectly well-appointed inn looks like a total loss.

It seems that 150 freshmen decided it was within the law for them to have a celebration. Fifty sophomores thought it was presumptuous.

And the latter just above proved their point, for they succeeded in capturing and transporting to "somewhere near Garden City" over forty trussed-up freshies.

The sophomores, such as had escaped arrest or casualties requiring medical attention, were in full possession of the village early today.

Prices realized at Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending February 18: Native steers, 16½c; western cut, ranged from 12½ cents to 13.50 cents per pound and averaged 12.18 cents per pound.

A Sterilized Milk From High-Bred Cows From Sanitary Dairies

The Result of 20 Years of Expert Effort to Produce a Super-Grade

Van Camp Products Co.
Indianapolis, Ind.

Double Butter Fat

All the Van Camp condenseries are surrounded by sanitary dairies filled with high-bred cows.

The fresh milk is brought in and placed in a vacuum. There, by low heat, more than half the water is evaporated.

Then we have a milk as thick as thick cream—over twice as rich as it came from the cow.

Van Camp's serves as a cream for coffee, cereals, or ice cream as it is. If you want rich milk, dilute it with an equal part of water. For cooking, dilute it further.

Cheaper—Richer—Safer

Van Camp's costs less than bottled milk. It is vastly cheaper, because it saves all waste.

Keep small cans and large cans on the pantry shelf. Open what you wish.

Thus you have milk for any purpose. Never a shortage, never a waste.

You have a sterilized milk—the only safe sort for infants or for drinking.

You have for your cooking a full-cream milk, instead of the usual skimmed milk.

An Extraordinary Milk

We have worked 20 years to attain for you the utmost in a milk. It comes from healthy, high-bred cows. It is protected in all scientific ways.

Compare it with other milk, bottled or in cans. You will find Van Camp's the milk you want.

Order from your grocer, and today.

The Waldorf Way

You may think he's a busy physician, but if he dashes right past the counter to the service room of a Waldorf Lunch, the black "medicine case" he carries is filled with little bottles in which he takes samples of milk from each Waldorf Lunch to be tested in the Waldorf Pure Food Laboratory.

Everything the Waldorf serves or uses has to pass the standard Waldorf tests for purity and quality. Even when someone tries to sell Waldorf a new brand of flavoring extract, it is tested and analyzed.

When a new Waldorf dish has passed the laboratory's food tests, the chefs prepare minute instructions for the under-cooks throughout the System explaining just how to add each ingredient by weight even to the exact amount of seasoning. Detailed directions for cooking and serving accompany each recipe.

That's why Waldorf food—from Beef Stew to Apple Pie—should always be uniform in taste and appetizing quality in every city.

That's why the Waldorf formula for Doughnuts is just as precise and accurate as the formula for making the famous Waldorf coffee.

We are continually striving to perfect Waldorf service and to create appetizing bills-of-fare to please every taste. We like to receive letters and suggestions. If you like a new Waldorf dish, tell us so. Bits of commendation or ideas for improvement help us to make the Waldorf service better for you and your neighbors.

Glass Houses on Main Street

If we should do all our Waldorf cooking and baking in glass houses on the main street, we wouldn't do it with greater cleanliness and care than we do today.

Figuratively speaking, Waldorf kitchens and bakeries are "glass houses" now, wherever they are—and a cordial welcome is assured to anyone who wants to "look through them." They are busy twenty-four hours a day. Twice each day, with vacuum cleaners, scrubbing brushes, and good old-fashioned "elbow grease," they are scrubbed and scoured from floors and walls to benches and cooking utensils.

All the way from the chefs to the counter-men who serve you, Waldorf food is guarded by cleanliness and precision, even to the point of scientific study.

Expert chefs originate each recipe. They test it for flavor and tastefulness. And when you receive it over the counter of a Waldorf Lunch it is a finished Waldorf product of the best quality because Waldorf chefs and the cooks throughout the System never use food substitutes of any kind for anything.

EXPLAINS HOW MOTION PICTURE LIGHT FIGURES WERE JUGGLED

Edison Expert Tells of Plan That Put High Kilowatt Cost on Householder

How the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston juggled its cost figures so that a low rate of two cents per kilowatt hour might be charged for cooking, charging storage batteries, refrigeration and irrigation purposes was explained today before the State Public Utilities Commission by Arthur S. Knight, expert consultant of the company.

He explained the company decided the rate for this class of business "would have to be very low as the competition was severe." He then said it was decided that in making the rate that the "diversity factor would be greater than for the power business." In other words, the company charged off three and one-half times more of its cost expenses to schedule A (for household lighting) than it did for schedule B1 (storage batteries, etc.).

As the result of this method of juggling cost figures the householder pays 11 cents per kilowatt hour for electricity, while the man who uses it for a storage battery, cooking, refrigeration or irrigation gets the same power for two cents.

Knight further explained that the company may abolish the "diversity factor" as the growth of the business increases. He said there is always a considerable surplus capacity in the system and that costs have to be figured on total investment.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND COMMENT

Correspondent Raps Managers Who Hoodwink Public With Cheap Pictures

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

BOTH E. J. K. of Brookline and "Harvard" have sent in for replies from William Reisen of Boston, who also offers a criticism of the motion picture reviews as they appear in this column each week.

"The foundation of picture making," he writes, "is good acting and a good story. It is an art; it has been demonstrated time and again. The great majority of the public (women especially) know a good picture when they see it. But profiteers did and will flood the market with cheap productions—with the flimsy excuse that the public wants them.

"A very striking case was 'The Little Minister.' The Modern Theatre paid probably 50 per cent. less for its 'Little Minister' than the Loew's Orpheum did, but compared with the Common picture, it was but a brazen effrontery, like many others of similar stamp.

"It becomes the duty of the press (as abroad) to expose, ridicule, and finally discourage this by the harshest criticism possible (you are much too lenient), educating the ignorant part of the public at the same time. If such worthless pictures were exposed in every paper, the receipts are bound to show the effect by the end of the week, consequently the crafty managers will think twice before trying to show financial results by hoodwinking the public with cheap pictures. Eventually it would stop this sort of productions for good and all.

"As for E. J. K., of Brookline, (presumably, I judge, well past middle age) I would suggest that he invest in a moving picture house showing the 'Westerns' he craves. If the returns happen to be meagre he may find the company of his public to be a consolation anyhow!

"A presidential election may mean something to a few hundred thousand politicians for four years, while 'The Kid' affected at least 80,000,000, if not 100,000,000 people in this country alone, and if not peerless, it surely is a landmark for the future in the art of picture making. This means 'Harvard.'"

ON "THE ORPHANS" and "MY BOY"

EDITH ROSEAN ORNE writes from the Institute of Fine Arts of Griffith and little Coogan. "After witnessing a performance of 'Orphans of the Storm,'" she says, "and listening to the remarks of those near me, I came away with this impression: If D. W. Griffith would use his wonderful imagination and most unusual executive ability toward producing something artistic, beautiful and uplifting instead of things gruesome, repulsive and degrading, it would be much more entertaining and pleasing to the general public and would have an influence for good in the world that could not be estimated. 'Let the dead past bury its dead' is a pretty good motto.

"Things that are repugnive in real life are as much or more so reproduced, for as a rule they are unexhausted and leave the observer morbid and depressed. We need something to idealize and brighten life. Griffith could do this as no one else could, if he would not be changed.

"Again the picture 'My Boy,' featuring that dynamic bit of mischief, love and sympathy, Jackie Coogan, is absolutely spoiled by the child stark naked taking a bath. It is doing him an injustice, for his acting is so superior that any suggestion of immodesty connected with it seems like sacrilege."

HOW ABOUT THAT MORALITY CLAUSE?

WHEN the first Hollywood disaster occurred, the Arbuckle affair, the motion picture producers came forward with the announcement that they would make use of a "morality clause" in all contracts drawn up from that time on.

Since then more than a few players have been signed up by various companies, but nothing has been said of this clause that regulates the home life of these players. It restrains them only inasmuch as the producer is privileged to break the contract freely if the player in question behaves in such a way as to discredit the company. Hollywood news would in all probability be less lurid if the morality clause was insisted upon.

CAMERA CLICKS.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has decided on the title for his next comedy. It will be known as "Pay Day," having nothing, he explains, to do with "Back Pay."

. . . Marion Davis, masked, led the dancers at the masquerade of employes of Cosmopolitan Productions at the Manhattan Casino.

. . . W. Somerset Maugham's first original story for the screen, "The Ordeal," is now under production at the Lasky studios in Hollywood. Agnes Ayres will have the leading role, while Conrad Nagle, Clarence Burton, Edward Sutherland and Adele Farrington will support her. . . . Vitagraph feels that it is reasonably safe to bring out an Irish film, "The Shaughraun," adapted from a stage play by Dion Boucicault. Pauline Starke and Pat O'Malley have the leading roles.

. . . Plans are finished for starring Edna Purviance in a series of feature pictures to be made at the Chaplin studios. Miss Purviance is a Vassar graduate and has appeared opposite Chaplin for a number of years.

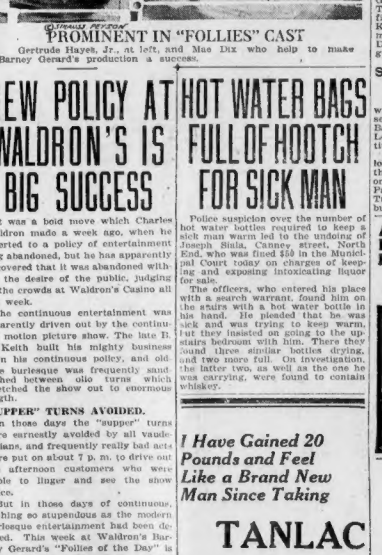
TWO DAZZLERS IN BIG SHOW AT WALDRON'S CASINO

Beauties from "Follies of the Day," the leading attraction in burlesque, proving all pulchritude is not confined to Broadway



Gertrude Hayes, Jr., at left, and Mae Dix who help to make Barney Gerard's production a success.

PROMINENT IN "FOLLIES" CAST

NEW POLICY AT WALDRON'S IS BIG SUCCESS

It was a bold move which Charles Waldron made a week ago, when he reverted to a policy of entertainment long abandoned, but he has apparently discovered that it was abandoned with out the desire of the public, judging by the crowds at Waldron's Casino all last week.

The continuous entertainment was apparently driven out by the continuous motion picture show. The late B. F. Keith built his mighty business upon his continuous policy, and old time burlesque was frequently sandwiched between olio turns which stretched the show out to enormous length.

"SUPPER" TURNS AVOIDED.

In those days the "supper" turns were earnestly avoided by all vaudevillians, and frequently really bad acts were put on about 7 p. m. to drive out the afternoon customers who were liable to linger and see the show twice.

But in those days of continuous, nothing so stupendous as the modern burlesque entertainment had been devised. This week at Waldron's Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day" is the attraction. This is one of the biggest shows in the country. The chorus is as large as any first class musical comedy. The settings are sumptuous and were designed by Joseph Urban, no less.

PACKING THE HOUSE.

What, you say? Absolutely. Gerard purchased last year's Follies production from Flo Ziegfeld, which cost originally over $100,000.

Just think of tucking such a show as this in with a flock of vaudeville turns and a feature photoplay.

Mr. Waldron has had the courage, when he found business bad, to boldly increase his expenses instead of trying to decrease them, and the result appears to be the return of the old days of packed houses at Waldron's Casino.

$800 IN LIBERTY BONDS LOST BY MAIL THEFT

Liberty bonds valued at $800 comprised the greatest loss in the looting of a registered mail pouch at the White River Junction, Vt., railroad station Saturday, according to attaches of the Postoffice Inspectors' office in the Federal Building. The rifled pouch contained thirty pieces of mail, which were to be dispatched at points between White River Junction, Vt., and Springfield, Mass. It was said the pouch was noticed to have been cut when placed on the train for shipment.

HOT WATER BAGS FULL OF HOOTCH FOR SICK MAN

Police suspicion over the number of hot water bottles required to keep a sick man warm led to the undoing of Joseph Sisia, Canney street, North End, who was fined $50 in the Municipal Court today on charges of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale.

The officers, who entered his place with a search warrant, found him on the stairs with a hot water bottle in his hand. He pleaded that he was sick and was trying to keep warm, but they insisted on going to the upstairs bedroom with him. There they found three similar bottles drying, and two more full. On investigation, the latter two, as well as the one he was carrying, were found to contain whiskey.

IRISH TENOR SINGS BEFORE 3,000 PERSONS

McCormack Holds Audience Which Jams Symphony Hall Enraptured

Having completely recovered from his recent illness, John McCormack, America's most popular male singer, entertained more than 3,000 enthusiastic music lovers at Symphony Hall.

Not only was every seat in the hall occupied but more than 500 chairs were placed on the stage to accommodate those who desired to hear his golden voice. In addition, hundreds stood in the aisles.

Mr. McCormack's voice is unimpaired by his recent illness, which necessitated the cancellation of many dates. It has the same warmth and sweetness as ever. He held the large audience enraptured from his first appearance until, in response to the continued applause he sang, "The Last Rose of Summer" as a final encore.

ALL AGES IN AUDIENCE.

A casual inspection of the audience was sufficient to determine why McCormack may be rated as America's most popular male singer. It included music lovers of every age, ranging from young children to white-haired grandmothers. Women predominated by a two to one ratio.

His program was a varied one. He sang especially well Chausson's "La Caravane"; Bridge's "Go Not, Happy Day"; Kramer's "The Last Hour"; O'Reilly's "To Ireland"; Poole's "Through the Long Days and Years"; Hughes' "Norah O'Neale"; "Mother Machree," and a new song entitled, "Little Town in the Ould County Down."

As an encore to his first number he sang Hugo Wolf's "Gebet" in German, it being the first time that he has sung in the language on the American concert stage. He did this because of inability to obtain an English translation of the song, one that he is very fond of.

TWO MORE CONCERTS.

Mr. McCormack is to sing again at Symphony Hall next Wednesday evening and Sunday afternoon. At the Wednesday evening concert he will sing "Kathleen Mavourneen" for the first time in five years in this city. There have been 200 requests for it.

He will also sing a new song, "My Little Hillside Home," and "Would God I Were a Tender Apple Blossom." The latter is said to be one of the finest Irish folk songs ever written. Kreisler has made a violin arrangement of it that he recently played for David Lloyd George while a dinner guest.

MAYOR TO FIGHT TO KEEP NAVY YARD HERE

Declares Move to Abandon Plant Shows Disregard of New England Interests

Mayor Curley began a fight today to save the Charlestown Navy Yard, which, according to Washington dispatches, may be abandoned as part of the retrenchment program under the limitation of armaments agreement.

The Mayor's stand on the matter is to be carried to Washington by Congressman Peter F. Tague, who planned to leave for the Capital following a conference with the Mayor at City Hall.

Mayor Curley declared that the move to abandon the Charlestown yard is an "utter disregard of the interests of New England by the most powerful delegation to Congress Massachusetts ever had."

He specifically blames Vice-President Coolidge, Speaker of the House Gillett, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Secretary of War Weeks for neglecting the interests of their home State.

"Such a move as the suggested abandonment of all navy yards on the Atlantic Coast except those of New York and Norfolk certainly would not be taken hurriedly, the mayor said, "It must have been in contemplation quite some time. And it surely would not have been considered without the knowledge of the senior Senator from Massachusetts.

"If any navy yard is to be closed or abandoned, certainly the last one to be contemplated would be that at Charlestown, not only the oldest and best equipped, but the most powerfully fortified."

CURLEY O. K.'S PLAN FOR BOSTON-CHELSEA BRIDGE

Mayor Curley today approved the plans for the new bridge over the Mystic River, connecting Boston and Chelsea. Work will start at once. The cost will be $750,000. The present bridge is a temporary affair, constructed in 1913.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two at night for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

No More Gas in Stomach & Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in the stomach and bowels, take Baalmann's Gas-Tablets.

Baalmann's Gas-Tablets are prepared distinctly for stomach gas, and for all the bad effects coming from gas pressure.

That empty and gnawing feeling at pit of your stomach disappears, that anxious, nervous feeling with heart palpitation will vanish, and you will again be able to take a deep breath, often prevented by gas pressing against your heart and lungs.

Your limbs, arms and fingers won't feel cold; gas is driven away because Baalmann's Gas-Tablets prevent gas interfering with the circulation; drowsiness, sleepy feeling after dinner will be replaced by a desire for some form of entertainment. Your distended stomach will reduce because gas will not form after using Baalmann's Gas-Tablets.

ASK STATE RULE OF EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

War Veterans Now Exploited, Charges Agent of Labor Federation

"Private employment agencies are exploiting veterans of the World War," said Charles J. Holsden, legislative agent of the American Federation of Labor, today, in advocating regular fees and proper regulation of public and private employment offices.

A bill before the committee on legal affairs would place the agencies under the supervision of the State Department of Labor and Industries.

Ralph R. Dalton of the American Legion said he knew of an agency that had sent six men from Boston to jobs in Providence, but when the men arrived, there was no work to be had. He said it was wrong to extract $25 or $30 out of a man for getting him a job.

The opposition was led by Grace S. Cook, secretary of the Massachusetts Technical and Commercial Employment Association, representing the private employment offices in Boston. She said employment offices act as a buffer between employers and organized labor. The American Federation of Labor, she said, hopes to sound the death knell of the fee system in Massachusetts and in the United States. Where there has been a system of State regulation of employment offices, such offices have passed into the hands of organized labor for many years.

In Great Britain, when organized labor got control of the institution, it recommended the abolition of all private employment offices. She said the real inwardness of the opposition is that organized labor claims the right to furnish workers for all positions which are filled by the payment of wages or salaries.

NECK BROKEN, UNIDENTIFIED MAN DYING

A well-dressed, gray-haired man whose identity police have been unable to learn, is dying at the Haymarket Relief Station from a broken neck, following the discovery of his unconscious body at the foot of a flight of stairs in the Sullivan square elevated railway station today.

Discovery of the man's body was made by employes in the station. They found him crumpled in a heap at the foot of the stairs, bleeding slightly from cuts on the back of the head. He was sent to the hospital.

Police have been unable to find any witness who has any knowledge of the manner in which the man came to his injuries.

The theory that he might have been attacked and robbed is, apparently, exploded by the fact that $5 were found in his pockets. Physicians at the Relief Hospital say he was suffering from alcoholism, and it is thought possible he may have been the victim of an accident.

The man was fifty years old, weighed 180 pounds, five feet nine inches in height and of medium complexion. He was neatly dressed in a dark suit with a black overcoat. He wore a soft green felt hat and brown laced shoes.

He remained unconscious after being taken to the hospital, and was unable to give his name or an account of what had happened to him.

FAMILY SAVED BY PROMPT ACTION OF MOTHER

Tracing escaping gas to the basement of her home in East Boston, Mrs. Minchino turned off an open jet and ran to her apartment on the second floor, where the two children, Vincent and Mildred, were sleeping. She opened the windows, clearing the room of the fumes. She then aroused other occupants of the three-story dwelling.

Prompt action on the part of Mrs. Mary Minchino, twenty-three years old, who discovered an open gas jet in the basement of her home at No. 29 Porter street, East Boston, saved the lives of her two small children, Vincent and Millie, and prevented the leak from resulting in any serious harm to other occupants of the house.

The escaping gas was filling all of the chambers in the three-story apartment house when Mrs. Minchino whose flat is on the second floor, noticed it and began an investigation. Running downstairs, she traced the gas flow to the cellar, beneath the apartment of Salvatore Vassio.

In a small closet a gas jet was partially open. Mrs. Minchino turned off the jet and hurried upstairs to open the windows in her own apartment where the children were sleeping. Then she notified other occupants of the building, and the place was cleared of fumes in a short time.

The gas flow, at first thought to have been the result of an attempt on the part of some unknown person to wreak vengeance on some member of the household, is now believed to have been accidental.

HARDING UNABLE TO GIVE SENATE TREATY DATA

Rules It Incompatible With Public Interests to Bare Confidential Negotiations

By Associated Press.

Washington, Feb. 20.—President Harding, replying today to the Senate on the Hitchcock resolution asking for information relative to the negotiation of the Four-Power Treaty, stated it was impossible to furnish the required information because most of the negotiations were conducted without the maintaining of a record.

The President said it would not be compatible with public interests to disclose the confidential negotiations of the treaty negotiators, but he declared that "there were no concealed undertakings and no secret exchanges of notes."

The action followed a two-hour debate in the committee, and was taken after several Republican and Democrat Senators had indicated they would favor reporting the treaty to the Senate, but reserved the right further to discuss it on the floor. The negative vote was cast by Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada.

The President's reply to the Hitchcock resolution stated:

"I do not believe it to be compatible with public interests or consistent with the amenities of international negotiations to attempt to reveal informal and confidential conversations or discussions of which no record was kept, or to submit tentative suggestions or informal proposals, without which the arrival at desirable international understandings would be rendered unlikely, if not impossible."

HELD BY SOMERVILLE COURT AFTER ATTACK

Michael J. Piggott, thirty years old, giving his address as Wellington street, Boston, was arraigned in Somerville Court today on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, in connection with an attack made shortly after midnight on William Barry of No. 65 Atherton street, Somerville, on Somerville avenue. Barry was taken to the Somerville Hospital, where he is in a serious condition. Piggott pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 bail for a hearing March 6.

CRIPPLED BOY CHEERED BY NEW GIFTS

Clarence Nyman Helped by Money Sent by Readers of the American

The appeal for aid for little Clarence Nyman, the crippled youngster who has been confined to his bed for two years in a poverty-stricken home at No. 410 Franklin street, Cambridge, continues to have its effect—an effect that is leading the little chap to believe that, maybe, it isn't such a bad world after all.

Last week the Boston American investigated the lad's case and found that the family, supported by the widowed mother, Mrs. Agnes Nyman, was on the verge of utter destitution. The crib which Clarence had not left for two years was falling apart.

The Boston American instantly asked its readers for aid. The response was instant. A new crib was provided and funds were contributed to help the family through the Winter.

Today three contributions were received. The South Postal employes, who last week collected and forwarded $35, today sent $5.50 more. G. W. Varney, head of the leather firm of Varney & Puech, No. 146 Summer street, sent a check for $5, with the request that it be given to Mrs. Nyman if the new crib had already been purchased. And someone, who wrote without any signature, on the stationery of a downtown hotel, sent a $5 bill.

And so the little sick youngster, who hasn't complained through all his two years of suffering, is learning to smile once more.

MAN DIES, HUNT FRIEND AS SLAYER

Luigi Scible, thirty years old, of No. 2 Malden street, Malden, died at the Malden Hospital today from bullet wounds in the abdomen and left leg following a quarrel at Pearl and Charles street, Malden, with Aabbatorio Vona, thirty, of No. 184 Adams street, Malden.

The police have sent out a general alarm and the Italian quarter of Malden is much excited over the shooting.

Vona, a World War veteran who lost one arm in action, is charged with the murder of Scible, it being known that bad blood has existed between the two men for some time. The men were returning from a christening.

District Attorney Endicott P. Saltonstall of Middlesex County, visited the bedside of Scible and obtained an ante-mortem statement. Scible leaves a widow and three small children.

ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS CAMP TO OPEN EARLY

An inspection of the Prendergast Camp of the Boston Tuberculosis Association will soon be made by the preventorium committee of the organization, as it is proposed to open the camp earlier than usual this season. The camp is designed for the care of children living in homes where they are exposed to tuberculosis and under conditions favorable to infection. By giving these children sunlight, fresh air and proper nutrition it is possible to build up in them a resistance that may continue through life. A group of girls from five years old to fifteen will be the first taken to the camp.

COMMUTER RAPS BACK BAY SMOKE NUISANCE

"Knock Down the tSation," If Necessary, Says Carr at Ticket Hearing

"Somebody has got to clean up the Back Bay station of the smoke, dust and gas nuisance, if they have to knock the building down," said Charles Carr today before the State Public Utilities Commission in urging an order to compel the New Haven Railroad to issue twenty-five-ride commutation books for West Roxbury.

Mr. Carr made the statement as an aside in telling the commission that he planned with other members of the West Roxbury Citizens' Association to appear again before the body in connection with other matters.

William J. Drew urged twenty-five-ride books as a matter of convenience. "A great many people wouldn't live in West Roxbury if they had to use the Boston Elevated Company's system," he said. Attorney Joseph Lyons said he represented Mayor Curley, who is in favor of the plan.

E. L. Wilson of the New Haven opposed the plan on the ground that books would cost more than strip tickets.

GIRL'S STORY LEADS TO ARREST OF FOUR

A story told by Rose A. Jean of Peabody, following her arrest in a raid led to the arrest of four men on charges of white slavery. The men gave their names and addresses as Alfeus Batista, thirty-three, No. 18 Norman street; John Kondonis, thirty-two, No. 12 Margin street; Mikoi Sebastyowski, forty-eight, married, No. 213 Bridge street, and Amello Napoletono, twenty-three, No. 118 Essex street.

BOY HELD IN PLOT TO KILL JAP DELEGATE

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—A dispatch to a Japanese newspaper here said a Tokio schoolboy had been arrested in connection with an alleged plan to assassinate Prince Iseyato Tokugawa, a Japanese delegate to the Washington conference. The boy was arrested at the railway station when Prince Tokugawa arrived home.

WOMEN SHOPPERS FLEE FIRE IN LYNN STORE

A score of women shoppers were forced to flee to the street today in a three-story wooden building at Tremont and Market streets, Lynn. Firemen experienced difficulty in controlling the blaze, which is believed to have started in the basement of the building. Damage is estimated at $5,000. An overheated stove is blamed.

FARMERS AND LABOR MEN TALK POLITICS

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Approximately 200 delegates representing labor farmer and "progressive" organizations from all parts of the United States assembled here today to discuss plans for concerted political action. It was made evident a "third party" is not contemplated. The conference is expected to continue three days.

Corns?

—just say Blue-jay to your druggist

Stops Pain Instantly

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. A touch stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in two forms—a colorless, clear liquid (one drop does it!) and in extra thin plasters. Use whichever form you prefer, plasters or the liquid—the action is the same. Safe, gentle. Made in a world-famed laboratory. Sold by all druggists.

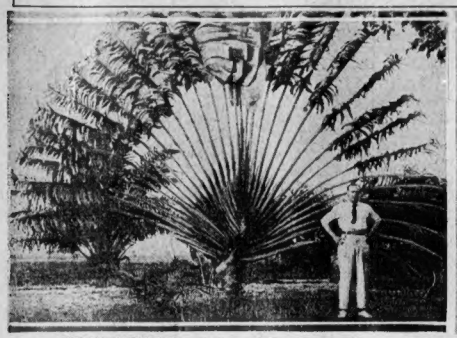
GIRL SEEKS GOVERNORSHIP ON JAZZ TICKET



FOR TRAVELING MEN! Of all remarkable palm trees this one takes the palm. It is known as the traveler's palm and its branches provide a cool, soothing drink for thirsty travelers.

SUMATRA wrappers and fillers are imported to all parts of the world, but here is where the native buys his "smokes."

SNOW BIRDS! Miss Pauline Shepherd is shown shaking hands with Supt. Brooks of the Union Pacific R. R. after an arduous journey out of Yellowstone Park by dog team. She told him snow was twenty feet deep, on right of way. (Underwood)

A STROLLING PLAYER! Miss Emmy Koescho of New York City, one of the most popular of the younger set at Palm Beach, was caught by the camera man just after a frolic in the surf. (Wide World)

A PETTING PARTY! Mrs. Charles Dillingham, wife of the New York theatrical manager, caused the Palm Beach "regulars" to elevate their eyebrows the other day when she took her pet raccoon for a stroll. The little chap is tame and playful. "Beware of Dogs" is his slogan.

IN THE SWIM! Miss Helen Vernon, 13 years old, created something akin to a sensation when she won the all-round women's swimming championship of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, an organization noted for the number of its national champions. (Underwood)

HEADING THE STYLES! Lady Diana Manners, England's famous beauty, wore her hair in this 17th century fashion, with bangs and side curls, and now all society women there are taking it up. (International)

MISS MARY LASKER, daughter of the chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board, is an ardent golf fan and most any fair day will find her toeing off on the links of the Washington Golf Club. (Wide World)

A BIRD OF A JUMP! Phil Taylor, skating champion of Canada, undaunted by a bad fall, went right out and took this ski leap off a mountain side at St. Moritz, Switzerland. He landed not far from the foot of the trees.

ALICE PETTIGREW, campaign manager for her sister Helen, 21, pretty and vivacious, who is running for Governor of Kansas on an "anti-blue law" platform. She favors jazz. (Underwood).

"MANNA" FOR THE MANY! Walter N. Pearce of the Department of Commerce, Washington, is shown sampling Turkish "manna," supposed to be the same substance that fell from the skies for the Israelites. It was sent to him by the Syrian Bishop of Jerusalem. (Underwood.

WE'VE HEARD of Silver-Tongued Ladies—but here's a girl whose tongue is golden. Miss Claire Mackin, who is suing a Chicago dentist for injuring her tongue. She wants $20,000 damages. She says his emery wheel slipped.

TO THE TUNE OF RINGING BELLS AND SHOUTING BELLES THE SLEIGH RACE STARTED! Sleigh racing at St. Moritz, Switzerland, is distinctly different from the sleigh race common to New England. A type of sled similar to the familiar "bob sled" of America is used and the race is on ice—not snow. Two contestants ride the sled, one in back to supply the "motor" power and one in front to steer.

CUTTING CAPERS! Dame Fashion, dear old thing, announces that almost every type of Spring costume will have a cape. This striking garment is fashioned of white serge trimmed with black braid and white braid. (Underwood)

JAPANESE CUTIES have taken up the fad of decorative combs, and here is the latest style—an antimony comb in teapot design.

BARONESS Gabrielle Von Ruchow, who posed for this picture at request of ex-Kaiser.

"HORSEPITALITY!" The latest oddity in fashionable Santa Barbara, Cal., is the "saddle breakfast," and recently society folk there had an elaborate meal served with all the luxuries and conveniences of a breakfast room. Among the distinguished guests was Miss Dorothy Paine of Boston.

Mexico City Garrison Fires on Election Rivals Fighting in Suburb

By International News Service.

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—Soldiers from Mexico City garrison today restored order at Ixtapalapa after a clash between members of the Agrarian and Labor parties, in which three men were killed and thirty wounded. Ixtapalapa is four miles south of this city in the Federal district.

There had been ill feeling between the parties since the municipal election. It was decided to hold a plebiscite yesterday to adjust the dispute. Secretary Santibones was attacked while trying to calm the populace. General fighting followed.

General Alberto Held as a Revolutionist

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—General Alberto, formerly of the Federal army, has been arrested at Torreon, on suspicion of revolutionary activities in behalf of General Fabela. General Marrero and General Murguria, said a dispatch from that city today.

Federal cavalry from General Escobar's command is pursuing the Torreon rebels into the mountains.

Mexico to Pay Foreign Debts With Oil Taxes

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—The balance due on $40,000,000 taxes owed to the Mexican government by the "Big Five" American oil companies will be paid this week, it was learned from official sources today. The taxes cover a period from July 7 to February 16.

The government has promised to apply the tax money on the foreign debt. This taxation covers exports of petroleum. Smaller companies already have paid several hundred thousand dollars.

AGED ENTERTAINED AT CAMBRIDGE CITY HOME

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Eastern Dog Club Show Holds Interest of Smart Set

Random Notes of Society Folk in Town and Country

THE younger married set of Palm Beach has formed a dancing club, to be known as the Samedi Soir, and will give dinner dances at the Palm Beach Country Club each week. An orchestra was brought from Washington for the initial meeting of the club held last Saturday night. The patronesses are Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Mrs. Reginald Boardman, both of Boston, and Mrs. Harry Payne Bingham, Mrs. Harry Darlington, Mrs. Charles Winn and Mrs. John M. L. Rutherford.

Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Howland, Miss Edith Rotch, Mrs. Martha Brown, Charles Rotch and Francis Monroe will figure prominently among the fancy skaters to take part in the skating carnival at the Cunningham Rink in East Milton tonight.

Mrs. William Byers is a member of Boston society who is spending the Winter months in California. She is staying at the Hotel Maryland in Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kinnaird Tod and Miss Constance Peabody, who are at Palm Beach, are planning to remain there until Spring, when they will come to the Beverly Farms home of Mrs. Tod, going later to Scotland for the Summer.

Mrs. James Lowell Putnam was a guest of Mrs. Adolph Pavenstedt at a luncheon given by the latter at the St. Regis on Friday. Mrs. Putnam is visiting in New York for a few weeks.

Mrs. Alfred Codman left Palm Beach the end of last week and is returning to her home on Arlington street. She has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding.

The Prince and Princess Boncompagni, the latter was formerly Margaret Draper, sailed for Europe on Saturday. They entertained members of the Italian Senate at luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton prior to their departure.

Mr. and Mrs. Summer Welles, the later was formerly Miss Esther Slater, daughter of Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater, are now established at Cannes, France, for the remainder of the Winter.

A recent portrait of Miss Eleonora Sears, taken at Mrs. Vanderbilt's ball in New York. Miss Sears sailed for Europe on the Olympic last Saturday.

MISS ELEONORA SEARS
(Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.)

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE tenth annual show of the Eastern Dog Club, which will be held at Mechanics Building for three days, beginning tomorrow, is one of the leading attractions on the social calendar for the month of February. The entries for this show include dogs from the kennels of many well known Boston people. Many of these dogs were shown—and to great advantage—at the Westminster Kennel Club Show held at Madison Square Garden in New York last week. They are under more or less of a strain, for which their exhibitors are preparing as best they can. That a show-dog is under tension during exhibition events is well known, and having two such important shows within a week puts the entries at a distinct disadvantage.

A dog which will be given more than a little attention is Boxweed Barkentine, owned by Frederick C. Hood of Clyde street, Brookline. This Airedale was the one to win the majority of the honors of last week's show. Mrs. George S. West of Chestnut Hill has entered her famous greyhound, Master Butcher, while Quincy A. Shaw McKean of Pride's Crossing will be represented by Tweak 'Em, his prize wire-haired fox terrier. William Prescott Wolcott will show dogs from his Readville kennels.

The Sealyham terriers will be a centre of attraction, for they have been entered by such leading dog owners as Albert Geiger, Jr., of the Hemlock Hills Kennels in Brookline and Bayard Warren of the Barberry Hills Kennels in Pride's Crossing.

The fox-hounds, too, will be interesting, as well as the pointers and setters, particularly since Charles H. Taylor of Berkeley street, Arthur R. Sharp of Commonwealth avenue, and Hobart Ames of North Easton have offered special prizes for these dogs. The prizes are to be awarded on merits of their everyday working qualities, rather than their bench characteristics, an innovation in itself.

There seems to be quite an exodus of Bostonians who are seeking sunnier climes in which to pass the windy months before Spring comes. Among those to leave on the Olympic on Saturday, besides Miss Eleonora Sears, were Henry V. Greenough of No. 39 Worthington road, Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. Storey of No. 52 The Fenway, and Mrs. Whitman Ware and Miss Effie E. Whitman of No. 48 Mount Vernon street.

Several more sailed on the Adriatic for a cruise through the Mediterranean, a trip proving more than popular at present. Mrs. John L. Thorndike and her daughter, Miss Alice Thorndike, of No. 181 Marlboro street and Mrs. Marcus M. Kimball and her son, Lawrence Kimball, of Otis place also sailed, to be gone a few months.

Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno opened her home at No. 238 Beacon street this afternoon for the song recital given for the benefit of the Calhoun Colored School in Alabama, in which a number of Boston women are actively interested.

Some of those who are acting as patronesses for the affair are Mrs. Lawrence G. Brooks, Mrs. Winton H. Fay, Miss Emily Hallowell, Mrs. Gerald W. Hallowell and Mrs. N. P. Hallowell. The program will be presented by Charles Hastings Grant, a baritone, for whom Mrs. Grant will act as accompanist.

Rehearsals are well under way for the coming Vincent Club show, "Now and Then," from the pen of Mrs. Augustus Thorndike, Jr., the former Olivia Lowell. Miss Dorothy Forbes and Miss Elsie Nichols, president of the club, are in charge of the work.

Following in the footsteps of those who ran last year's show, the members of the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard will join with the Vincent Club in giving their annual performances. This year's musical comedy—as yet unnamed—has been written by William Chapin Jackson, a senior, of Darien, Connecticut, and Robert Cameron Rogers of Cambridge, a junior, assisted by Edgar Scott of Philadelphia, who has scored in a number of the shows given by the Cercle Francais.

JAPS CONCEAL VAST SUPPLY OF OIL

American Engineers Are Told Mikado's Kingdom Has Store for 300 Years

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 20.—Oil production and charges that Japan has concealed the extent of its oil possessions is up a large part of the program of the 125th meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, which opened a three-day session today.

At the opening of today's meeting the organization issued a statement declaring "Japan possesses much more oil than her propagandists have tried to make the world believe she has." At the present rate of consumption, avers the report, Japan has three centuries of supply, while the United States has only twenty years of probable oil reserves.

"These conclusions," says the report, "are given by Chester W. Washburne, New York geologist, as his inferences from an examination of a paper by J. Morgan Clements, mining engineer and geologist of New York."

According to local engineers, Mr. Clements is the best informed foreign geologist on the question of Japan's supply of oil.

IMMIGRATION CHECK EXTENDED BY HOUSE

Washington, Feb. 20.—The House today passed and sent to the Senate a resolution extending until June 30, 1923, the 3 per cent. restrictive immigration law. The rules were suspended to permit action at this time.

Prohibition Agents May Use Airplanes on Florida Coast

Washington, Feb. 20.—Use of airplanes along the Florida coast in the war on rum smugglers was understood today to be under consideration by prohibition headquarters.

Airplanes were understood to be part of a gigantic program involving activities in the air, on the water and on land to stem the tide of illicit liquor from West Indian and other islands.

Commissioner Haynes inicated that extraordinary means would be adopted to cope with the situation in Florida.

BOMB SHATTERS STAIRS UNDER WIFE AND BABY

Pair Found Unhurt After Jersey Blast That Wrecks Three Houses

By International News Service.

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 20.—Three houses in Woodbridge avenue, Highland Park, were destroyed today by an explosion which police declare was due to a bomb.

Mrs. Mary Josephsky was standing on a stair landing holding her year-old baby. The stair was blown out from under her, but both were picked up from the debris uninjured.

Fragments of one house were blown 200 feet.

Police held Ralph Woenough, who gave the first alarm, on suspicion. They say no traces of a still could be located and are confident it was a bomb explosion, though no fragments of the bomb have been found.

GIRL, 18, SHOOTS BROTHER WHO BANNED BEAU

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 20.—Lena Russo, eighteen years old, today emptied a revolver at her brother, Alfonso, probably fatally wounding him. She alleged he upbraided her for letting a caller stay until after midnight and attacked her father.

Alfonso, who is twenty-one years old, had forbidden his sister to let the caller come to the house again when the father, who was favorably impressed with the young man, intervened. Alfonso, the girl said, had thrown her father across a bed and was choking him when she rushed to a bureau drawer, snatched her father's revolver and fired.

She then called the police, who took the brother to a hospital in a dying condition and arrested her on a charge of felonious assault.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

AMERICA NOW THE HOME OF GOLF PASTIME, SAYS CHAMPION

By JOCK HUTCHINSON

For many, many years Scotland has called the home of golf and true enough it was, but today though we can truthfully say that Scotland was the birthplace of the game, America is the present home of the royal and ancient pastime.

I have seen enough this past two months to convince me of this.

Jim Barnes and myself are on the last leg of our tour to the Pacific Coast. We left California early in February after a delightful trip and a most successful tour.

Golf enthusiasm in the Far West was far greater than we had expected. It was like a new world, but when we reached the golf course it was like home again and the people we found there talked golf, looked golf, and played the game just as they do all over the world.

It was a great surprise to me to see as many followers of the game who came, not through curiosity, but as critics. It was not a case of Jim and myself going out to spread the gospel, but to play exhibitions against good players.

At times we were forced to take our medicine, and seldom did we encounter opponents who were what one might call easy pickings.

When we played well we won. When we were off a bit, the opposition won. Which is as it should be. It was always a friendly gallery that greeted us, but in all fairness to cities, they wanted to see the local players triumph.

I won the Northern California open and Jim annexed the California open, and we were well pleased with our good luck, as the field was a good one in both cases.

California courses are not a great way behind those of the East, and as they have the reconstruction work out there soon all of the coast links will be brought up to date.

* * *

There are no end of good golfers in California and through Washington and Oregon. We found many familiar faces in the gallery down at Los Angeles in the Winter colony, but the majority of the stars were natives.

* * *

We landed in Texas after our California trip, none the worst for wear and tear of three or four games a week. Texas is fast growing as a golfing centre and taking its place with the leading golfing States of the United States.

We found fully as much enthusiasm in the Lone Star State as we had found farther out West. There are any number of good courses and like wise many good players. They appeared to be just as glad to see us, and every match we have had over there in so far has been followed by a large gallery and, like California galleries, they were not idle critic seekers.

El Paso was our first stop, where I was lucky enough to back up my own record. Then we doubled back to Albuquerque and returned to Texas again, time to the Lone Star State. Both Jim and myself regretted that we were not on hand for the annual pro tournament played there.

The citizens were still talking about the remarkable golf displayed by Big Bob McDonald when he won the tournament with a total of 231, almost a record for 72 holes play. He was pushed hard by Cyril Walker of Englewood, a fast coming professional in tournament play.

* * *

More prize money was offered for this event than has ever been put up before for a similar test, but I am sure the money was well spent. San Antonio is now on the map of Winter golf tournaments, and it is not unlikely that the golfers will hang up another big purse next season.

* * *

The municipal links there is a thing of beauty and a course well laid out. More towns in the country should follow the example of this enterprising Texas town and encourage public course golf.

* * *

Golf in Texas is new in comparison to other places. Golf architects tell me that there is plenty of work to do down there, not only in building new courses, but in reconstructing some of the older ones. It is possible to golf here all the year around, which is a great thing to develop players.

* * *

I realized for the first time that we had been very lucky of late golfing conditions in America after my review of California and Texas courses, and I agreed with me. This has led me to predict that we are now the greatest golfing nation and will continue to hold our place at the top for all time.

* * *

More Britishers I am told are going to tour America this year. One team is composed of J. H. Taylor and Bobby Reed, two of the best there.

Herd has done remarkably well in tournament play in England during the past two years, and his partner, Taylor, has done enough in golf to earn him an undying reputation. Five times he has been victorious in British open championships. Only Harry Vardon has done more.

This pair will be prominent contenders in our open championship, and if Herd plays as well here as he played abroad in British tournaments he will surely be among the leaders. Taylor, like Vardon and Braid, is not as young as he used to be. Three veterans' golf is good in spots, but in a 72-hole competition it is different.

George Duncan and Abe Mitchell are likely to play in our open also. They were not satisfied with the showing made here last year and this may lead them to make another assault on the American open title. Abe played Skokie in record figures, and when he heard that the championship was to be played on this course he wanted to return and make up for his poor showing of last year.

Mitchell and Duncan are grand golfers and class with our best over here. They did not do as well last year as they expected, so another trip across the Atlantic is coming to them. With four of England's best in our open, it will add an international flavor such as it has never had before.

BRAVES' MANAGER IS GLAD TO GET "RUBE" AND KOPF

By NICK FLATLEY.

Wry necked Rube Marquard, recent acquisition from Cincinnati, gives the Braves just what they needed in the pitching department to make them regular pennant contenders—an experienced southpaw. Nobody can deny that the Rube is a southpaw, nor that he has had plenty of experience. He waltzed into the large league back around 1911, and has lingered there ever since.

He has a lot of pitching left, yet, as he showed in '21 by winning some seventeen games. Had he been around our large ball orchard last season, the Mitchells would have been much closer to the Giants, at least, when all was said and done.

Larry Kopf, who comes along with the Rube, is a mighty good infielder and fiendish like to come with another crying necessity, strength around second base. Larry and Barbare are likely to have a hot battle for a steady job, but that will worry nobody but themselves. The pair of them will be very useful.

* * *

Barbare played good ball in spells last season, but for long stretches should have been laying up from injuries. There was no one handy to put in, so Walter had to stay there, to the hurt of his playing. With an extra hand to fill in, that trouble will be erased in the coming campaign.

* * *

Any trade that bolsters up two bad weaknesses at the same place is naturally a good one. John Scott, who goes to the Reds, was a whale of a pitcher at times. His work was streaky, long strings of defeats following victory stretches, but there is plenty of stuff and courage and liked to work. He's one of the lads who may step out any time with a sensational season. Owner Grant undoubtedly is of the opinion John over to the enemy, but he had to get an infielder, and a southpaw was one he has 'em, and Fred Mitchell has a much more promising flock of material to work on in the South than he had a year ago.

Fred has four right handers who can go to the bill regularly, and accordingly, the somewhat ancient Rube will be called to work too often for his own good. He will be a useful bird to have around for relief purposes. A pitcher of his type would have meant at least ten games to the Braves last season, and that many contests in the locker would have changed the entire complexion of the race.

* * *

Frexy Grand has manufactured a lot of new friends for himself by this deal, which shows the b. b. populace that one Boston owner is sincerely trying to get himself a real ball club.

* * *

Manager Mitchell is perfectly satisfied. He put his Co. K. on the trade when Grant hied to Cincinnati to talk turkey with the Red moguls.

"We knew," declared Frederick, "that we had to have another infielder and a left-hander. We tried to buy one and couldn't. So we had to trade. And I think this latest deal has strengthened the club a lot.

"I hated to let Scott go. John has a fast ball that will beat any club in the world, whenever he has it under control. But we had to give value to get anywhere. I think Grant quitwitted the Cincinnati club, but that doesn't make me sore.

"We have enough pitchers now, and with an experienced left hander I can plan much more confidently for a good season. This I won't have to shoot right handers in there day after day. The constant switch in south paw hurling is absolutely necessary for a pennant winning team, unless you have the wicked stuff of Walter Johnson.

"Fifty times a season, there comes a call for a left hander. Sometimes you only want him to pitch to one batter. Then we're through. We didn't have one last year. Braxton and Cooney are too young, though most promising. This is another year, and the new deal makes me look forward to it with plenty of courage.

* * *

"Kopf is a fine little infielder, and from what I've seen a very dangerous hitter in a pinch. He and Barbare will have to fight for a regular berth, but they'll both be available. Had we one other infielder last Summer, when we almost got to the top, I really believe we could have kept climbing. If we got in a similar spot this time, we'll have the necessary material."

DECIDING GAME OF SCHOOL HOCKEY

Favor Cambridge Latin to Beat Melrose for Greater Boston Championship

By Fred C. Lane

The championship of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Hockey League rests on the result of the Cambridge Latin-Melrose game at the Arena tonight. Both teams are tied for first place, the eight-team league and the going in tonight's melee should be the best yet shown by schoolboy sextets.

Early in the week "Tubber" Cronin, captain of Cambridge Latin and considered one of the best schoolboy players in the State, sustained a sprained ankle. This injury was so painful that there was little hope that he would be able to play tonight.

* * *

The injured member is better and as "Tubber" will be on the ice when time is called, Chick Shea will return to defence.

* * *

Melrose has Harrington and Dale, both able performers and fine examples of efficiency in handling a puck. Dale plays a defence position where he has starred all season. His work in checking back has been a big asset to his team.

Cronin is hailed as the best looking prospect in the school ranks for years. On the other wing for Cambridge Latin is Red Groden, an able skater and stick handler.

Cambridge fans have become accustomed to championship teams in all lines of sport and will be out in full force. Melrose will also send a large delegation to the Arena, as well is the high school team followed.

The defeat handed the Milton Academy team last week has given the stock of the Cantabs an enormous boost. The private school team had whipped the best hockey team in this section with little trouble. Because of this victory Cambridge Latin will enter tonight's game a favorite.

* * *

The mid-year vacation will give the Boston High School track athletes a much needed rest. The lads are on the last stretch of what has been the busiest part of the indoor season.

The hockey teams in the Boston High School League will play their usual games on Saturday, with Mayor Curley donating medals for the match between Dorchester opposing Hyde Park, and Boston English meeting Boston Latin.

Because of the ancient rivalry that has existed for years between English High and Latin School the hockey game should be a hummer.

* * *

Mal Cunningham, Lynn English's star track man, will be lost to all athletic teams of the year. The broken leg sustained at the Greater Boston Interscholastic meet will keep him in bed for eight weeks.

It is doubtful that another 50-yard dash will ever take place on the Y. M. C. A. floor. Coach Whitney of the Huntington School, one of the first to render aid to the stricken athlete, will suggest a 45-yard dash in place of the half century sprint.

The additional five yards would give the sprinters time to slow up. Cunningham was warned early in the race by Ralph Cosson of Allen School to hit the wall with his arms. In his trial heat he tried this means of slowing up and received a sharp impact. In the finals he used his legs to slow down and broke his leg.

* * *

Malden and Brookline will play off a scheduled league game at the Arena this evening. Brookline should pile up a lopsided score on the Malden team, which is without four of its regulars.

HEAVYWEIGHTS ARE DRUG ON MARKET

New York, Feb. 20.—Probably inspired by the presence of so many wrestling champions of various nations touring this country, there has developed a bewildering number of heavyweight boxers, claiming the championship of various countries, some of which have hitherto been absent from the pugilistic map.

A few of the latest to stake claims are: Frank Haggsy, Australian claimant; Harvey Nelson, Swedish champion; Joe Brocco, Italian titleholder; Jim Coffey, Irish Free State champion; Indian Clay Turner, redskin title holder; Soldier Jones, Canadian champ, and Eddie Civil, heavyweight champion of Kentucky.

These title-holder sprang up recently with the increased demand for minor heavyweights when it was evident Jack Dempsey was going to "hog" the limelight. Other countries are expected to be heard from if the impresarios of the ring return decent recognition.

Matchmaking among the heavies is largely confined to those who can make the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds, which includes nearly all of the contenders.

The engagement Tom Gibbons and Harry Greb for next month in New York clarifies the situation somewhat as the winner is supposed to get a bout with Gene Tunney for the American title and eventually the victor to that go will meet Carpentier for the world's championship.

WINCHESTER LEADS BASKETBALL LEAGUE

The standing at the end of the third week of the Suburban Girls' Basketball League series finds Winchester High leading by a substantial margin. The Winchester girls have won three straight games.

Only one league game is scheduled for this week. Watertown will play Arlington on Friday.

MEDBURY

Says Flirting Is Only Indulged in by Two Classes of People---Men and Women

A public reformer has just come out with a statement that it's wrong for strangers to flirt. That's foolish; if they know each other they shouldn't have to flirt.

Flirting is more popular with single men than with married ones. Why shouldn't it be? If it wasn't for flirting a lot of the married ones would still be single.

They fell in love with some girl at first sight, and by the time they took a second look it was too late.

You should look before you leap, but a lot of guys are still leaping while their wives aren't looking.

Flirting is usually indulged in by two classes of people—men and women.

The old way to flirt was for a girl to drop her handkerchief and let the man pick it up. The girls were different clothes every day, and the only way a man could tell whether he was flirting with the same girl or not was by the laundry mark on the handkerchief.

* * *

Of course a lot of girls used to fool the fellow by changing their laundry.

The woman always lets the man say the first love words, but she does the talking the rest of the time.

Some men don't believe in handkerchief flirtation. They'd rather wink at a girl out of their good eye.

Still when a guy winks at you today, you don't know whether he's flirting or bootlegging.

But there's really no difference; they're both in the smashing business.

One movie comic winked at a dame one day and before he knew it six girls came over and said: "Hello."

Flirting is dangerous, the woman doesn't always get you off easy with a fine sentence. Once in a while she marries you.

When a girl goes out looking for a husband she can usually find everybody's but her own.

A woman who flirts on the main street very seldom gets any further behind. He's generally busy flirting on some side street.

The average flirter always has an alibi. He'll go home and tell his wife that some girl followed him for ten blocks and he couldn't get rid of her because she kept right in front of him all the time.

CALZA AGAINST TWO IN MAT CARNIVAL

Will Wrestle Annibale Rizzo and Charles Berg and Kilonis Meets Morrow

With the increased interest in wrestling events at the Grand Opera House the management will put forth a top card Thursday night when George Calza, the Italian heavyweight, will lock arms with two men.

He will first take on Annibale Rizzo, a heavyweight Boston wrestler, who thinks he can throw Calza and the latter agrees to pin him in thirty minutes.

Charles Berg, the Swedish giant, will be given a trial, and from all accounts he is a rugged chap and will give Calza a tough battle.

John Kilonis who meets Jack Morrow, the middle weight wrestler, in a one fall finish match will have a busy night, as Morrow is a clever and fast chap who knows the art of grappling.

Harry Mamas, the rough house Greek, will tackle Paul Bowser, the Boston favorite, and the latter promises to make it hot for the Greek if he pulls any of his rough tactics.

The downtown ticket office is at the Howard and the box office at the Opera House is open Thursday.

Will Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Bay State-Ariment Country Club is planned for tomorrow in the clubhouse, Arlington Heights. Jesse A. Holton, the president, will preside.

'HELLO BOSTON,' DEMPSEY GREETING; CHAMPION EAGER TO FIGHT

By JACK DEMPSEY.

Heavyweight Champion of the World.

Hello, Boston! I am sure enjoying my first visit to this city. I shall be at the Old Howard this week, and am glad to show before Boston and New England fans.

It is my hope that before I journey Westward again to my home in Los Angeles, I will have had at least one more battle—and against the toughest foeman in the game.

It is immaterial to me who I fight. I want to fight—that's the big thing. I have been loafing since July and that's long enough. But the only reason I have been loafing is that no opponent has come along who seems sufficiently formidable to cause promoters to match us up.

* * *

The battle on March 13 between Tom Gibbons and Harry Greb interests me a lot. I will be right there by the ringside. I hope that one or two of the boys will show up great enough in this battle to create a big public demand for a meeting between the winner and myself. Nothing would please me more.

* * *

That fight ought to be a wonder. I have never seen Gibbons in action, but from what they tell me, he has developed into a marvel in the last years. He will need to be that to successfully mix it with Harry Greb, who has been aptly called "the rubber ball of pugilism."

Greb has energy in unlimited quantities. I never saw a man like him. He has served on occasions as my sparring partner and each time we mixed the air seemed to be full of flying fists—the majority of them belonging to Greb. He is as quick as a cat, never set, never still, hits from every angle and his speed is a tough thing for any foeman who faces him.

* * *

Greb can hit. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise. He has tremendous power in either hand. But, like a lot of other fighters, Greb never has gone in much for knockout triumph. He seemed always content to win battles on points. He has been fighting for several years as Gibbons used to fight before Tom decided to quit the "Man on decision!" business and sought a knockout record.

I guess Greb realizes that if he is to get a shot at the heavyweight championship of the world, it will be necessary for him to do more than outpoint Gibbons. He undoubtedly has it figured out that he must do something knocking out himself to really qualify in public opinion. And because of that, I imagine Greb will jump into the battle on March 13 and fight in a way designed to give him a knockout triumph over Gibbons.

Arlington Has Two Games

Arlington High girls' basketball team will play two games this week with Wellesley tomorrow afternoon, and on Friday afternoon with Watertown High.

WESTMINSTERS AND UNICORNS WILL PLAY ON HOLIDAY

The B. A. A. and Westminsters, tied for the lead in the United States Amateur Hockey Association series, will play at the Arena on the holiday night. The Unicorn team will also play against the Quaker City team on Saturday, also in a league championship contest. The Philadelphia team defeated the Westminsters Saturday, so that the B. A. A. sextet has a chance to win the Eastern divisional group title this week.

In the league standing the Pere Marquettes are third, the Quaker City team fourth and St. Nicks fifth. It looks very much as though the two defeats suffered by the Caseys put them out of the race for good.

* * *

This will be a busy week at the Arena, for several important school games are billed, and the St. Pats of Ottawa will play two games.

* * *

The demand for reservations for Wednesday night's game between the B. A. A. and Westminsters in the league series is tremendous. Indications point to the house being sold out long before Wednesday.

There will be a double-header Wednesday afternoon, Arlington High will play Newton High and Cambridge Latin and Ringge Technical will furnish action.

The St. Pats will play their first game against Pere Marquette, K. C., on Thursday night and second with the Westminsters Friday night.

English High and Boston will play a championship game upon which the title rests, as a side attraction to the Westminster-St. Pat battle.

* * *

The Westminsters will get a much needed workout in a regularly scheduled game with Melrose while the B. A. A. will practice with Harvard today and tomorrow. Of course the Westminster team will win from Melrose tonight. That's a foregone conclusion.

Princeton and Dartmouth will not play tomorrow night.

RUTH WILL GET BASEBALL'S HIGHEST SALARY

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN,

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 20.—Showing that he has a good head for business, regardless of his $70,000 salary demand, Babe Ruth will leave Milwaukee tomorrow for a course of baths at Hot Springs preliminary to his regular Spring training work with the Yankees at New Orleans.

The champion slugger's salary for 1922 will be $60,000 with a premium for each home run—just double the figures for last year. Thus with eleven home runs to his credit Babe will exhale John McGraw and his $65,000 contract as manager of the Giants, for which the race for the honor of being the most expensive human element in baseball.

* * *

Ruth and the Yankee management have agreed to terms. The actual signing of the contract and the decision whether Babe will be docked for his suspension of thirty-six playing days will be taken up later.

* * *

This, no doubt, is the last we shall hear of the monger of Ruth during this year. The slugger will go about his work as usual, and the contract will be signed quietly. The actual signing of the document will not be announced, and certainly the amount of money will be made.

As Babe begins the training camp the rail birds back home are speculating as to whether it is within the reach of the slugger to exceed last year's record of fifty-nine home runs in the Bambino world strike the forty-five mark in his curtailed season.

* * *

Deducting the days of his suspension, Babe will play in about 115 games next Summer. That is to hit sixty home runs he must average better than one every other game. By travelling at the pace he set in 154 games in 1921, the Bambino would strike the forty-five mark in his curtailed season.

* * *

One element that will favor the slugger is the uncertain weather, for with average April and May weather, Ruth probably will pick up seven or eight extra games through postponements.

The start of the slugger for the training camp is a relief to one branch of the Yankee headquarters other than the financial department. Persons who persist in writing Babe some two hundred letters a week now will know where he is, and will not clutter up the club's mail box.

"Through the Winter Babe's writing public couldn't keep up with his vaudeville route, and we received the bulk of his mail here," said Charlie McManus, the round little home secretary of the club. "We're glad to handle the letters for Babe, of course, but it gets to be somewhat beyond us at times when we are busy with other things.

* * *

"Ruth's mail always is heavy but on account of his tour it was greater this Winter than usual. The mail includes not only letters from the various, but communications on business that Babe really ought to have quickly, and we try to do our best with them. We're sending almost a bagful down to Hot Springs."

Providence Five Wants Games

The Dennis Post basketball team of Providence, formerly known as the Providence Five, would like to arrange out-of-town games with any professional team in and around Boston—Fitton A. C., St. Mark's, Plymouth, Gloucester K. of C., Marlboro, Worcesters, South Boston A. A., Boston Whirlwinds and Cohasset preferred. The team is composed of some of the strongest players in Rhode Island.

O'KEEFE AND SILVA HEAD CARLYLE SHOW

By JACK CONWAY.

Jimmy O'Keefe, a fair name for ton debut when he battles Harry Pound bout at the Carlyle A. C.'s tonight.

O'Keefe comes to our fair city with a fine record back of him. He dropped Eddie Fitzsimmons to the canvas on one occasion, while he battled Ancient Jack Britton to a draw.

The Chicago youth is a regular ring Adonis. When he parades along Tremont street even the flappers cease to think about the style of their overshoes and such things.

* * *

Silva is a rugged, two-fisted fighting person, and is not worrying about the outcome of tonight's mill. He plans to carry the battling in his rival, and feels sure he will be out front when festivities end.

* * *

Soldier Franks of Pawtucket, who recently engaged in a sensational quarrel with Charley Miller, will have Jim Wright, an ebony hued warrior from Lynn, as an opponent in the semi-final of eight frames. This should develop into a torrid mill.

Johnny Donovan, clever South Boston lightweight, will be back in our midst in another eight-session affair. He will have Jack Mansfield of Lawrence as an opponent.

Danny Edwards of Los Angeles and Frankie Young Mack of Hartford will mingle in another eight-round affair. Then so that everybody will be happy Danny Cowhin of Lowell and Tom my Dechart of Texas will clash in an other eight-round affair.

* * *

The Naumkeag A. A. of Salem has arranged an attractive card for its show on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday. The feature bout of ten rounds will bring together Paddy Owens of Cambridge and Tommy Nee, South Boston featherweight. These boys should furnish a lively tilt.

Joe Lavean of Salem will oppose Porkey Diggins of Nashua in the semi-final of eight frames. Patsy Brannigan of Quincy and Jimmy Plaze of Beverly will box six frames as will Kid Terry of Salem and Young O'Brien of Boston.

Lynn will be very much out front on the local map tonight with Jimmy Amarto White, one of the new sensations of the ring game carried to bat tle Mike Morley of Hartford in the main event of ten sessions. White, under the management of Tony Ross polo, has been a sensation since he in vaded New England. This nineteen-year-old youth has pushed his way to victories over Paddy Flynn, Billy Duffy, Johnny Herman and Waite Ruther. He looms forth as one of the best welterweight prospects in the land of fistic strewers.

* * *

The St. Joseph's A. A. Society will stage an open amateur boxing tourna ment at Commercial Hall on the night of Washington's Birthday. There will be contests at 118, 126, 135, 147 pounds and in the heavyweight division.

* * *

The Old Howard is sure to be taxed to capacity this week with Champion Jack Dempsey doing his act twice a day. Jack Bearns, manager of the world's champion, says the title holder will give a monologue, also in a gymnasium act and do some boxing. Of course the fans are all eager to see how "Tiger Jack" shapes up. Many of the oldtimers, like Gus Daly, still compare the present champion with John L. Sullivan, whom most of them still contend was the greatest heavyweight the world has ever known.

Secretary Ivey Lewis says Shevlin and Regel will play to the largest crowd to ever witness an indoor boxing match in Boston when they battle under the direction of the Armory A. A. at Mechanics Building a week from tomorrow night. Lewis bases his opinion on the heavy demand for reservations at the Tripler A's office at No. 61 Court street. The fact Shevlin has not lost a bout in more than two years and Regel's recent win over Tommy Robson are the factors which have created such intense interest in this match.

BOSTON BOYS IN MESSENGER SPRINTS

Six Western Union Trotters Will Compete in Races at New York

Six Boston boys will go to New York tomorrow to upset tradition, confound newspaper cartoonists and put jokesmiths out of business. They are Western Union messenger boys and they will compete in short dashes, mile race, a handicap event for supervisors and a relay race against the Eastern Division can produce—the fastest messenger boys in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Buffalo and Boston.

For years we have been told that messenger boys spend most of their time between the receipt and delivery of a telegram in crawling ants at a snail's pace, resting at the corner of the curb. The Boston boys propose to show the world that they and their confreres are much maligned and that they can produce speed, speed of a kind that will make the celebrated college relay teams sit up and take notice.

The race will be part of a program of athletic sports staged by the Western Union Telegraph Company at the 22nd Regiment Armory in New York, open to all registered messengers and sanctioned by the I. C. A. A. A. A. A. A. L. and A. A. U.

The Boston entrants follow:

60-Yard Dash—Boys under 118 pounds
Frank Regar

60-Yard Dash—Boys over 118 pounds
Daniel Burke

Mile Race ..... William Baird
Relay Race—Heavyweights: William Baird, Feliz Leslie, Daniel Burke and R. Jackson.

Supervisors' race, with entrants from Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg and Boston, will be represented by Joseph V. Barger, delivery supervisor of Boston and captain of the athletic team.

Considerable interest is manifested by the fact that City Superintendent Crane, Manager G. L. McAvoy and several of the employes are going over to New York to root for victory.

WHITE AND JACKSON IN 15-ROUND BATTLE

New York, Feb. 20.—Charlie White, nimble footed Bohemian pugilist of Chicago, and Willie Jackson, Bronxite, will meet in Madison Square Garden tonight in a fifteen-round bout under American Legion auspices.

Jackson and the astute booking characters both aspire to lightweight title held by Benny Leonard. Benny is under contract to meet the winner of the bout in a championship contest.

BOWLERS ON LAST LAP OF TITLE TOURNEY

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Bowlers entered in the world's championship tournament at the Coliseum were girding for a gruelling finish today as the tourney approached the final stages. At least a dozen entrants still have an opportunity to finish first and carry off top honors.

GERMAN BIKE STAR SIGNS TO RACE HERE

New York, Feb. 20.—Walter Rutt of Germany, one of the veterans of the bike game, has signed a contract to appear in the six-day race scheduled for Madison Square Garden March 6 to 11, it was announced today.

For Dorchester Title

The Columbus Club of Dorchester and Robert Fulton K. of C. will clash for the championship of Dorchester on Washington's Birthday afternoon at the Dorchester High School gym. Ed Cotter, centre; Gillen, Dever and Gaisley, forwards; Kenney and Page, backs. The Fultons will use Murphy and Foley, forwards; Lapiante, centre; Grant and O'Hearn, backs.

DARTMOUTH'S STRENGTH WILL BE IN FIELD EVENTS

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 20.—Dartmouth's team for the triangular meet has been selected as a result of time trials held last week by Coach Hillman. The trials show that the Green has its most evenly balanced team in years, and Hillman is confident that this balance will make up for the loss of the brilliant performers that Dartmouth has had in the past.

Dartmouth's strength as usual is centered in the field events, where it has Brown, Libby, Harris and Lee. However, the Green is much stronger in the runs than it has been for several years and the outcome of the meet will depend to a great extent on how Drew runs today.

* * *

Captain Roy Brown in the high jump and Libby in the pole vault are two men of brilliance on whom Dartmouth relies heavily. Brown is regarded as the best jumper in the colleges today, and is expected to break the triangular meet record of 6 feet 2¼ inches.

* * *

Libby's only limit in the pole vault seems to be the strength of the pole. As it is, he is capable of better than 12 feet.

With Brown in the high jump will be Sawyer, and possibly one other man. Dartmouth has two other vet erans in the pole vault with Libby, in Smith and Pope.

Harris, Rippel and Anderson are the Dartmouth hurdlers selected. Harris got a third in the H. A. A. meet after he had been set back for a false start, while Anderson has equalled the record in the hurdles. Lee, who got second in the 440, put in the meet last year, and Furnbull and Murphy, who have been chosen for the shot, and along with Swenson, will also compete in the thirty-five pound weight event.

Trials for the broad jump will be held this week. It is in these events that the main strength of Dartmouth is centered.

The dash men will not be picked until today or tomorrow. Three men will be picked from Coffin, Fiterman, Pulkin, Lynch and Allen.

* * *

In the 300, Dartmouth has Hallett and Stearns, both of whom turned in fast trials. Foster, one of last year's freshman relay men, is the team's best man in the 600, and can be counted on to do well in any kind of a field. Stern or Caldwell of last year's varsity relay, will run with Foster in the 600.

* * *

Granger and Little, both juniors, will run varsity competition, will be the Dartmouth starters in the 1,000. Art Coakley, winner of the event two years ago, has been troubled with a bad leg, and it is extremely doubtful that he will be able to run.

In Sherburn Reynolds has a new miler who has been coming along fast in the last three weeks. Sherburne has always run the two-mile and has been consistently fast, but it has shown no such quality at the shorter distance that he has been changed. Nazro and Whitcomb, two cross-country men, will be the other Dartmouth starters in the mile.

Young is a veteran two-miler upon whom the Green relies. Either Udall or Windsor will also run this event.

The one mile relay team will be picked from Hyatt, Sawyer, Reynolds, Foster, Rippel and Anderson.

The Freshmen trials will be held Cornell and Harvard have a special event, will probably be Bates, Lane, Hodgett and Hill.

PLAYERS AT HOT SPRINGS GOLF ON SUNDAY

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 20.—Al Devormer of the Yankees and Cecil Causey, Bill Ryan and Earl Smith of the Giants have arrived here and joined Everett Scott in devoting most of the Sabbath to golf. Eight-mile walks and baths will be the daily course beginning today.

Fred Toney and Phil Douglas, Giant pitchers, and Carl Mays, Bob Shawkey, Joe Bush and Sam Jones, the bulwark of the million-dollar pitching staff of the Yankees, remain absent, and it is now thought that none of these men will report here for preliminary work.

MINOR LEAGUES WILL SHOW A REVIVAL

A revival of minor baseball leagues is indicated this year, according to advices received in baseball offices. At least six new organizations have been formed and others are being discussed. These leagues are going ahead for the season without the settlement of the draft controversy.

Minor league baseball suffered more from the war than did the majors. Many organizations were compelled to quit in favor of industrial teams, while the dearth of material because of the absence of young men with the army made it a difficult task to recruit players.

MILITARY POLO TEAMS CLASH ON FRIDAY

First Battalion, 101st F. A., to Stage an Attractive Program

There is considerable interest in military circles concerning the combined section competition and polo game to be held by the First Battalion, 101st F. A., in Commonwealth armory on Friday evening.

The Batteries have been practicing for some time to develop expert drivers and speed and precision in going into action. This occasion will be their opportunity to prove the respective merits of their best sections.

A splendid bronze shield has been donated which will be held by the winning section for one year, and which will be a permanent property of the battery winning the shield for three successive times.

The light artillery rough riding squad will give an exhibition of Roman riding and mounted pyramid building which should be one of the greatest interest to horse lovers.

Another big attraction in the polo game will be passed by the First Battalion polo team vs. the Dedham Free Booters. The latter organization is composed of many old-time players who are internationally known and who are former members of Myopia and Dedham Hunt Clubs.

Practice held in the armory has shown they are a brilliant combination and will give the battalion team an hour of very active polo.

Girls' Basketball Game

Lexington High girls' basketball team will play the first game of its inaugural Girls' Basketball League series with Arlington High on March 3.

The return contest will be staged in Lexington on March 24.

LEGION STAGES ANNUAL SPORT CARNIVAL

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Wednesday and Saturday are the two big nights this week for Greater Boston track fandom.

On the former the American Legion of Massachusetts stages its annual indoor games at the East Armory, while in Mechanics building on Saturday will be conducted the annual Harvard-Dartmouth-Cornell triangular meet and the New England A. A. A. U. indoor championships.

Those who plan to attend but one of the two have quite a problem in making the selection for each meet has attractions of rare promise.

* * *

A program of twelve special and invitation events and ten relay races will be offered by the Legion, and the list of entries disclose the names of world's record holders and world and national champions galore.

* * *

No sweeter field of middle distance performers ever reported to the mark than that which is scheduled to face the starter in the Boston 600. Jake Driscoll, world's record holder for the 500 yard run, all conference winning of the recent Archbishop Hayes meet and event at the K. of C. games in New York, gained permanent possession of one of the most valuable track prizes ever offered for competition, when he and Bart Budd, the Oxford and Olympic middle distance title holder, and runner, and Dave Caldwell, former national champion and former intercollegiate titlist, compose a few of the many stars who will trod the boards in the event.

Not as the "Boston mile" field less impressive. Jole Ray of the Illinois A. C., who in the past two weeks has set three world's records, Mike Delaney of the Millrose A. C., Jimmy Connolly of Woburn and Georgetown University, Larry Shields of Penn State, and possibly Farnon Hal Cutshall, are on the list and the race is not unlikely to lower the indoor mile mark.

* * *

The list of entries in the 50-yard high hurdles is headed by Earl J. Thomson, Dartmouth's world record holding hurdler, who comes intent on lowering the mark in that event, and who will face among other great timber toppers Bill Meanix of the B. A. A. and a member of the recent Olympic team; Joe Sullivan, former B. U. star and New England champion, and Dick Whitney of Harvard, who was second place winner in the B. A. A. hurdle event.

* * *

Dick Landon of the New York A. C. who holds the Olympic high jump and record; Walter Whalen, former national titlist in this event; Earl Thomson and several other leaders of quality are entered in the high jump, and every special and invitation event on the program abounds in entries of equal quality.

And the relay numbers are equally promising, particularly the two-mile event in which Jake Driscoll leads his B. C. team against the Tech array which took Harvard's measure at the recent B. A. A. meet and the medley number in which the Massachusetts Legion team clashes with the New York Legion quartet.

Will Play Tech Freshmen

Arlington High hockey sextet will play the Technology freshman team Saturday afternoon.

Arlington Plays Watertown

Arlington High basketball team will play Watertown High tomorrow at 3 p. m.

The Hardware Store and Athletic Goods

The Hardware Store in small cities and towns has always been headquarters for guns, ammunition and fishing tackle. The addition of Athletic Goods will liven up the Sporting Goods Department—they will bring to their store the boys who want Baseball, and other Athletes who will be customers for the other implements, etc., usually carried in stock by Hardware dealers. A Delightfully Refreshing Story of Love and a Woman's Way With a Man

THE STORY SO FAR

James Edgerton, 3d, of an old and aristocratic New York family, returns to New York from abroad on hearing that the firm founded by his forebears has failed. He pays dollar for dollar and finds himself left with an inherited apartment luxuriously furnished, which an iron-clad will has entailed. With two dollars in his pockets he refuses the offer of an old-time friend to help, goes to the apartment, and finds it occupied by two charming young women, distant cousins, who beg him to forgive them for being there. They are as poor as he is and have advertised for a position, using the apartment as their headquarters.

NOT one thing could he sell under the will of Peter Edgerton to save his body from starvation or his soul from anything else; and he jingled the two dollars in his pocket and thought of his talents, and wondered what market there might be for any of them in a city whose bricklayers were paid higher wages than school teachers, and where the wealthy employed others to furnish their new and gorgeous houses with everything from pictures and books to the ancient plate from which they ate.

And, thinking of these things, his ears caught a slight rustle of silk; and he lifted his head as Diana Tennant and her sister Silvette came toward him through the farther room.

"Isn't this a mess?" said Silvette in a clear, unembarrassed voice, giving him her hand. "Imagine my excitement up on the roof, Mr. Edgerton, when Diana appeared and told me what a perfectly delightful man had come to evict us!"

"I didn't say it that way," observed Diana, her ears as pink as the powder-puff peonies above them. "My sister," she explained, "is one of those girls whose apparent frankness is usually nonsense. I'm merely warning you, Mr. Edgerton."

Silvette—a tall, free-limbed, healthy, and plumper edition of her sister—laughed. "In the first place," she said, "suppose we have luncheon. There is a fruit salad which I prepared after breakfast. Our maid is out, but we know how to do such things, having been made to when schoolgirls."

"You'll stay, won't you?" asked Diana.

"Poor Mr. Edgerton—where else is he to go?" said Silvette calmly. "Diana, if you'll set pieces for three at that very beautiful and expensive antique table, I'll bring some agreeable things from the refrigerator."

"Could I be of any use?" inquired Edgerton, smiling.

"Indeed, you can be. Talk to Diana and explain to her how respectable we are and you are, and how everything is certain to be properly arranged to everybody's satisfaction. Diana has a very wonderful idea, and she's come to one of her celebrated snap-shot conclusions—a conclusion, Mr. Edgerton, most flattering to you. Ask her!"

And she went away toward the kitchenette, not at all embarrassed by her pretty morning attire nor by the thick braid of golden hair which hung to her girdle.

Diana cast a swift glance at Edgerton, and, seeing him smile, smiled, too, and set about laying places for three with snowy linen, crystal, silver, and the lovely old Spodel porcelain which had not its match in all the city.

"It's like a play or a novel," she said; "the hazard of our coming here the way we did, and of you coming back to America; but, of course, the same cause operated in both cases, so perhaps it isn't so remarkable after all! And"—she represed a laugh—"to think that I should mistake you for a malefactor! Did it seem to you that I behaved in a silly manner?"

"On the contrary, you exhibited great dignity and courage and self-restraint."

"Do you really mean it? I was nearly scared blue, and I was perfectly certain you'd stuffed your suit cases full of our toilet silver. Wasn't it funny, Mr. Edgerton! And what d.d you think when you looked into your studio and saw a woman?"

"I was—somewhat prepared!"

"Of course—after a glimpse into our bedroom! But that must have astonished you, didn't it?"

"Slightly. The first thing I saw was a white cat staring at me from the top of a trunk."

She laughed, arranging the covers with deft touch.

"And what next did you see?"

"Garments," he explained briefly.

"Oh! Yes, of course."

"Also a silk-flowered slipper with a very high heel on the threshold."

"Mine," she said. "You see, in the days of our affluence, I used to have a maid. I forget, and throw things about sometimes."

"You've a maid now, haven't you?"

"No, just a combination cook and waitress until we can find employment. She's horribly expensive, too, but it can't be helped, because it would create an unfavorable impression if Silvie or I answered the door bell."

"You're quite right," she said; "people have a conspicuous aversion to employing those who really need it. Prosperity never lacks employment. It's odd, isn't it?"

"It's rather cruel," she said under her breath.

Silvette came in bringing a chilled fruit salad, bread and butter, cold chicken and tea.

"We'll have to put it all on at once. You don't mind, do you, Mr. Edgerton?"

He said smilingly but distinctly: "One's own family can do no wrong. That is my creed."

Diana looked shyly at him.

"I wondered whether you knew we were relations," she said, flushing deliciously.

"You see," added Silvette, "it was not for us to remind you."

"Of our kinship? Why not?"

"Because you might have considered it an added obligation toward us," said Diana, blushing.

"I do—a delightful one; and it is very gracious of you to acknowledge it."

"But we don't mean to presume on it," interrupted Silvett hastily. "Some day we really do mean to re.ulate our financial obligations toward you."

"There are no such obligations. Please remember what roof covers you—"

"Mr. Edgerton!"

"And whose salt——"

"It's our salt, anyway," said Diana; "we bought it myself."

They seated themselves, laughing; then suddenly Edgerton remembered, and he went away with a hasty excuse, only to return again with a brace of decanters.

"My uncle's port and sherry," he said.

"Isn't it ridiculous" observed the young fellow, glancing around the studio; "when I surrounded by a fortune in idotic antiquities, lunching from a table that the Metropolitan Museum inherits after my death, sippi.g a sherry which came from the cellars of a British monarch—with two dollars and several cents in my pockets, and not the slighteet idea where to get more. Isn't it funny!"

Silvette forced a smile, then glanced significantly at her sister. Diana said gravely:

"We have several hundred dollars. Would you be kind enough to let us offer you what you require for immediate use until——"

"Why, you blessed child!" he said, laughing, "that isn't what worries me now!"

"Then—wha. is it?" inquired Silvette.

"You and your sister."

"What do you mean, Mr. Edgerton?"

"I mean that I'm worried over your prospects!"

"Why, they are perfectly bright!" exclaimed Diana. "In a few days somebody will employ us to help entertain a number of stupid and wealthy people. We'll make a great deal of money, I expect; don't you, Silvie?"

"Certainly; but I'm wondering what Mr. Edgerton is going to do with two dollars in his pocket and us in his apartment."

"So am I," said Diana.

"It's perfectly charming of you to care."

"What an odd thing to say to us! It is not very natural to care? Besides your being related, you have also been so considerate and so nice to us that we'd care anyway, I think. Don't you Silvie?"

Silvette nodded her golden-crowned head.

"The thing to do for the present," she said, "is for you to take that farther room. It was Diana's idea, and I entirely agree with her—after seeing you."

"That was the sudden conclusion of which I spoke to you," explained Diana. "Such things come to me instinctively. I thought to myself, 'if he mentions the kinship between us, then we'll ask him to remain,' and you did. And we do ask you; don't we, Silvie?"

"Certainly. If two old maids wish to entertain their masculine cousin for a week of two, whose affair is it? Let Mrs. Grundy shriek! I don't care. Do you, Diana?"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

How a Social Idler of an Impoverished Old New York Family Made Good in the End

FOR BUSINESS WOMEN

CLUB SUGGESTIONS OFFERED

By W. A. McKEEVER

A CLUB of young employed women of a certain well-known little city have asked me for suggestions of projects or achievements as the goal of some united effort. Their collective name is "Triangular Club," derived from the fact of its three-fold composition:

Business young women, school teachers and household assistants.

In responding I shall try to address myself to the numerous organizations of the class springing into existence throughout the country. And, permit me first to suggest the triangular symbolism involved in this interesting organization of girl workers:

Young business women, or those who work with their heads;

School teachers, or those who work with their hearts;

Household assistants, or those who work with their hands.

Then, as a motto of work for this interesting club of young women, let me suggest another kind of triangular symbolism—to find a project or a purpose that will unite the hand of all collectively and individually.

The head, to think; the heart, to love; the hand, to do—that is a further interpretation of the symbolism involved within the possible achievements of the Triangle Club. Take up a list of suggested projects as given below, select the one which seems most feasible, which appeals most to the heart, and rally to its support.

You may be interested in knowing that the young women's clubs are everywhere attempting something that is unselfish. However, some of your members will be timid, some will be doubters. Carefully worded publicity will assure them to action. All workers for the common good must learn the value of publicity. As a phenomenon of the cause of the young, I long ago found that the press honestly desires to give assistance to every worthy purpose of human betterment. And, so I urge every "Triangle Club" to study the press as well as the project. Learn how to prepare your story and to use the methods of the local publicity force.

Here are some undertakings which have been successfully promoted by the young women's business clubs:

To direct systematically the placing of homeless little girls in respon sible families.

To persuade young school girls of wavering disposition and irresponsible home influence to remain in school.

To keep watch over all young girls whose morals are in jeopardy and to throw safeguards around them.

To act as a parole sponsor for certain classes of young first-of fense delinquent girls and to seek to restore these to normal conditions.

To work for ordinances and police measures intended to guard the young, especially girls, against evil influences.

To erect or secure a building for the club, with apartments for meetings, public receptions, hospital service of members and social service.

To conduct annually a sort of institute of lectures and exhibits intended to educate the public in behalf of all the best standard measures for defense and welfare of girls.

Best Recipes

The following are winners of one dollar each in the Boston American's Best Recipes:

Charlotte of Pineapple

One can sliced pineapple, ¾ cup of rice, ¼ envelope Knox gelatine, ½ pint of cream, sugar, salt. Soak ¼ envelope Knox gelatine 10 minutes in ¼ cup cold water and dissolve over boiling water. Boil ¾ cup of rice in water till tender. Let cool a little. Then for each cup of boiled rice add ⅜ cup of sugar, ½ cup juice of pineapple, a little pinch of salt (very little) and the gelatine. To this mixture add the cream, which must have been whipped before. Place on ice or in a cold place for 2 or 3 hours. When serving, decorate with the slices of pineapple.

FROCKS FOR DANCING

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE flapper holds an important place in the social world today, and one has only to see the dainty frocks that the juvenile shops are showing to know how true this is.

Can you imagine anything more sweet than a girlish party frock of tea-rose taffeta all cut in rose petals and trimmed with silver grapes? One frock of this kind creates a sway little bodice, sleeveless and cut not too low either front or back, and attaches it to a full bouffiant skirt a little longer than we are accustomed to see them.

The skirt is made on a net foundation and shows six tiers all scalloped and picoted to effect rose petals. The silver grapes were attached at the left side and hung almost to the knees.

With this costume silver sandals and hosiery of tea-rose shade were worn, and in the bobbed hair silver bandeau with grapes completed the lovely appearance.

The vivid brunette will look her prettiest in a frock of flame chiffon with scant sleeveless bodice and jagged skirt. A girdle of silver ribbon with ends that hang below the skirt will lend cachet. Red slippers and stockings may be worn or silver if preferred.

An attractive frock was worn at a "prep" dance and was fashioned of peach taffeta. It showed a quaint fitted bodice with deep square neck, and was worn with a very full skirt of the material, held out by six heavy cordings at the bottom. An insertion of silver lace was used just below the hips, and a narrow black velvet girdle with two long ends weighted by old time flowers was the only trimming. A double band of silver ribbon was worn in the hair and silver sandals with peach chiffon hosiery completed the costume.

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

AN ABSORBING SERIAL OF LIFE IN THE CITY

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

(Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.)

AS the patient did her bidding, Dr. Carter stood watching the two women. He looked from one to the other as if contrasting the healthful vigor of one with the emaciation and pallor of the other. Adelaide knew that his eyes were resting on her searchingly. She could not bring herself to meet his gaze.

Instead, she took the empty glass from Mrs. Hollingshead and carried it across the room.

"Don't bother to go downstairs with that now," the invalid ordered. "I want you here with me."

"I am going to stay here," the girl assured her.

The blind woman held her hand out toward the speaker

"I want you to stay with me always, child," she pleaded tremulously. "I grow more dependent on you every day."

"Thank you!" Adelaide murmured.

A swift impulse of pity made her stoop and kiss the hand before releasing it. As she stood up, Dr. Carter spoke in a low voice.

"You bear a big responsibility," he said. "It is a great thing to be so depended upon, so trusted."

"I know it," Adelaide replied simply. "I wish I were more worthy of such a trust."

For the instant she felt at ease. The blind woman's words, the doctor's recognition of the importance of her work, had driven from her mind the recollection of the scene that he might have witnessed as he passed the dining-room door.

"I am sure you are worthy of it," John Carter affirmed.

And then Adelaide Brown remembered. Richard Hollingshead's embrace. Remembering, she then forced herself to look her companion squarely in the eyes.

The expression she saw there quieted her as a gentle speech might have done, for there was in it no suspicion, no accusation—only a kindly faith and assurance that warmed her heart.

Whatever this man had seen, he was not blaming her, was not accusing her of flirting with her employer's son, nor of encouraging undue familiarity on his part.

As she appreciated this, she found herself smiling happily. After all, if he trusted her, what need she fear?

The sensation was too agreeable for her to spoil it by analysis. A moment later the man was again the physician and she was the attendant of Mrs. Hollingshead.

After the doctor had asked the invalid a few questions he summoned the attendant to the hall on the pretense of giving her some parting directions.

"I do not approve of talking of medicine in the patient's presence," he explained to Mrs. Hollingshead as he took her hand on leaving. "I will see you again very soon."

In the hall his manner changed. "She is getting worse, rather than better," he told Adelaide. "I am thankful she has you — for you will keep from her, as much as possible, anything that would excite or agitate her. I know it is not an easy task."

"I do not mind it," the girl said. "Only——"

"Only what?"

"I hate to lie to her. I am not in the habit of lying," she added simply.

"I am sure you are not," he smiled. "But with a very ill person you cannot always be strictly truthful. I assure you, I understand."

Then he went away, leaving the girl once more with that comfortable warm feeling about her heart.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It can not hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.—Advertisement.

TONSILS AND ADENOIDS

By Brice Belden, M. D.

A GROWING child will not develop properly unless he receives a sufficient allowance of fresh air. If he fails to get it, due to obstructed breathing caused by diseased tons is and adenoids, he will not suffer in health but he will be handicapped in his educational progress.

Mouth breathing due to interference with normal respiration causes round shoulders flattening of the chest, a dull facial expression, headache, habit spasms, restless at night, depression of mental activity and defective speech.

Enlarged and otherwise diseased tonsils and also adenoids provide breeding places for the germs of such infectious diseases as diphtheria, scarlet fever, influenza, meningitis, pneumonia and tuberculosis. Rheumatism and its frequent sequel, heart disease, are due in a large majority of instances to infection by way of the tonsils.

The tonsils are a frequent gateway of infection leading to tuberculosis of the glands in the neck and of the lungs themselves. It may truthfully be said that there is direct communication between the tonsils and the lungs, through which a route for the dissemination of pulmonary infection may be established.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musssy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—Advertisement.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Man of Value.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty, engaged to a man five years my senior. I have known him two years prior to my engagement, which occurred recently. When I first met him I did not care for him and always refused to go out with him. He, on the other hand, belonged to the "wrong set" crowd and has been so ever since. He was very persistent in his attentions, and, though I told him after he first proposed to me that I did not care for him, he still kept calling on me and finally won me. He has been perfectly wonderful to me, although we have had some disagreements. He is quiet and refined, does neither drink, smoke nor gamble and comes from a nice family. He has been left to public school education and therefore is not a good writer or speller and his grammar is not perfect. I have corrected him a number of times and he seems to have improved greatly. I am a public, high and business school graduate and am considered to be a good-looking girl, while he is not good looking. I hold a responsible position and hope to be a lawyer and am earning a nice salary.

Lately my relatives, some friends and even business associates have been telling me that he is ordinary and that I surely can do better. This, of course, aroused some doubts in my mind and now I am miserable. I am trying to find out if I really and truly love him or if I have just grown used to him and therefore am making the best of the circumstances. How can I tell if I love him? If I see him a night or two I do not mind it, while he, on the other hand, says he is "mad, sick" if I do not. I do not get thrills whenever I see him. He objects to my going with certain girls who are my dearest friends and we often have disputes about them.

TROUBLED.

THE sunlight is "ordinary" in that we are used to it. So are the healthiest, simplest things of life can also be called ordinary—bread, for instance—but what would we do without it? Don't let criticism turn you against a man of fine character. Some of the greatest men have been entirely self-made, with no education to help them but the education of life and experience. Perhaps if you were to go about a bit socially and see the emptiness of most so-called "good times" you'd be better able to value this man.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrup at less than half. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of several well-known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified sugar honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Advertisement.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become overworked from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys pain and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Advertisement.

Stocks Close Strong in New York; Call Money 6 Per Cent.; Sterling Highest in Three Years

FRUIT ADVANCES MORE THAN 6 POINTS

U. S. Steel at Its Highest Since 1920; Market Active on the Rise

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The New York market was strong from start to finish, but closed below its highest. There was a profit taking in the last few minutes. Trading was active on the advance, transactions approximating 1,000,000 shares. U. S. Steel sold at its highest since 1920, being up 1⅞ at its best. Mexican Petroleum lost half the gain. Coppers were weak.

The upward movement continued in the second hour and the market was strong at noon. Despite the advance of the call rate, there was no pressure offered and the highest level was reached in the afternoon, when United Fruit was up more than five points. Sugar showed marked improvement, as did tires, railroads, steels, shipping shares and tobaccos. American Telephone advanced 4 point to its highest since 1917. The strength of grain and cotton helped stocks. Agriculturists will get more for crops and these increased values now will benefit business as a whole. The strength of foreign exchange helped foreign bonds, demand sterling selling at $4.49, its top figure since 1919. Money opened at 4 per cent. and in afternoon was quoted at 6 per cent.

UP AT THE OPENING.

The market had a strong and active opening after a quiet period of inactivity during the first hour. By mid-morning prices were above the initial level. There was short covering on considerable scale. Oil, equipment and rail issues were higher at the outset and sugars displayed class strength later. St. Louis & San Francisco, and St. Louis Southwestern were two particularly strong low-priced carriers. Highs for many a year were established by Baldwin, Rock Island, American Locomotive and Westinghouse. Mexican Petroleum made a large gain, advancing almost three points. Issues to rise a point or more during the first hour included Royal Dutch, American Ice, Iron Products, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Studebaker and Westinghouse. A few stocks were weak, particularly Stromberg Carburetor, off at a record low for the New York exchange, being down more than two points for the year, and near the half way mark. Columbia Gas receded more than a point and National Enameling more than seven.

FOREIGN OILS LED.

Foreign oils were among the leaders in early trading. The amendments made of an agreement between oil companies and the Mexican government for taxation 40 per cent. below the original levy was another market influence with keener interest and demand for railway shares is said to have been a factor in the strength. Buying of equipments in that quarter is increasing also, it is reported. Trading was still of an almost wholly professional character this morning and the circumstances in part to blame for "making more difficult the task of distribution by pools." The placidity with which Wall Street is reading the figures which show large 1921 losses by big industrial corporations is accounted for by the statement that had as they are they are no more calamitous than was expected. The idea obtains that the worst is over and that there will be improvement this year. Surplus shrinkage tells of vanished war profits.

EQUITABLE LIFE SHOWS GAINS FOR 1921

The sixty-second annual statement by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States gives a complete picture of the company's continued progress. The new insurance written in 1921 totaled $427,193,000, exclusive of $30,144,000 of group insurance. The outstanding insurance on December 31 had passed the $2,500,000,000 mark, over $53,000,000 was paid to policyholders and beneficiaries during the year in death claims, matured endowments, dividends and annuities, the total payments to policyholders since the organization of the Equitable in 1859 exceed $1,450,000,000. The assets are $651,301,000, an increase of $28,000,000 over the previous year.

The mortality rate for the year was the lowest in the entire history of the company. A notable increase was made in the number policies payable on the monthly income plan, as well as those taken to protect business interests and to provide for inheritance taxes. Over 98 per cent. of the claims by death claims were paid within twenty-four hours after receipt of due proofs of death.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Feb. 20.—The cotton market was irregular at the opening today. Heavy covering in March, short sold against contract on 18 points, while later deliveries were 7 points lower to 3 points higher. Liverpool cables reported Southern spot cotton easier, selling of July by Japanese interests and heavy seller by Liverpool, the other spot houses, Wall Street and New Orleans bought. Some of the commission houses were good sellers for profit taking, but the market was well sustained and after the first hour steady at about 10 to 12 points net on the active months. Opening prices: March, 18.26; May, 18.10; July, 17.52; October, 17.09; December, 16.86.

City Loans

Bangor, Me., awarded to the Merrill Trust Co. of Bangor $300,000 tax notes, dated March 17, maturing October 4, 1922, at 4.1915 discount.

Gloucester, Mass., will receive bids until 12 o'clock noon today for $100,000 notes in anticipation of revenue, temporary loan of $100,000, dated February 27, and maturing February 1, 1923.

London Market

London, Feb. 20.—The stock market was buoyant today. Consols, 56⅝, on 2½% British War loan, 92¾, up ¼; on 5% war loan, 101¾, up ⅛; on 4½% war loan, 97¾, up ⅛. Bonds in demand, Rio de Janeiro 5s, 75½, 4½s, 70¾, 4s, 58. Countries down ⅛ to ¼ higher, 5s, small issue, ex-dividend; Germany 5½s, 10.94; Japan 6s, 1924, 79¾; funding 5½s, 81½; new local at premium of 8.

Dividend Declarations

Keith's Boston Theatres Co. has declared a dividend of 1 per cent. on common, par value $50, payable May 15 on stock of record May 1.

Boston Wharf Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 10 per cent. on common, payable in common stock on March 31.

Boston Bank Statement

The Boston bank statement shows reserve excess of $747,000, a decrease of $721,000 in a week.

MOST FARMERS HAVE MONEY IN BANK

Western Financier Says Agricultural Situation Has Inspired Too Much Pessimism

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—You need a different kind of key for unlocking the future of business about every week or two in these times, and if you have a whole pocketful of these implements good. He indicated, however, that you are by no means sure of gaining reputation as a prophet. The whole Western country requires new tests.

A leading banker said that in his opinion we have been too pessimistic regarding the farmers. Roughly, he said, 25 per cent. of them are in bad shape and the other 75 per cent. have money in bank and are able to buy goods. He indicated, however, that their disposition to buy is small and one might guess that the reason for that is in the relative prices of commodities.

Farm products got the worst knock of any during the down turn in affairs and the feeling of injuries has not yet faded from the minds of farmers.

HAVE FIRM POSITION.

This feeling relates to the miscellaneous list of articles which every family wants and how greatly the farming class have restricted their purchases is markedly seen in the fact that many of them are saving coal by burning no fires in the house except in the kitchen. That partly accounts for the comparatively small quantity of bituminous that has been mined in the past few months.

His another street one sees the attitude of the farmer toward certain products of the milk whose materially mainly sold.

The idea that the horse should be reinstated in his old position has a believer on the farm is gaining ground rapidly. The prices of these animals have declined much that many authorities declare the tractor to be nothing like the economical accessory and large productiveness that it has been represented to be.

Among the largest farmers in North Dakota has stated that he will buy no more tractors but depend on horse flesh, and he makes out a strong case. That sort of thing is hurting the International Harvester Company and is perhaps the immediate provocative of the enmity which the Harvester Company and Ford. They want to get rid of their product.

The extent to which these auto vehicles have been placed in the hands of all classes of people is shown by an estimate of a responsible company that the number now existing in the United States is 9,524,256, an increase of 13.2 per cent. over the total for 1920.

WHERE FARMERS SCORE.

An evidence of the improvement among the farmers is found in the recent experience of the banks of the Northwest, which show considerable increase in the gross.

The Burlington Railroad for the first half of February 48,954 cars handled compared with 46,736 the corresponding period a year ago, and the other roads of this part of the United States are faring similarly. The statements of wheat on the Chicago & Northwestern last week were the largest for the road's history.

The reports of all the railroads of the United States having gross earnings of $1,000,000 or more per year, issued for some months past, may have given many people a false impression. These reports show increases in net earnings, it is the gross that indicates the condition of business. The net has increased through a restriction of ordinary maintenance and repairs. There will not be much of a revival of business till the roads find it necessary to buy supplies on a larger scale.

The West is going to have much benefit from the relaxation in the money market. Lending in this part of the country by New York banks has been a rare incident for many years but it is now reported that a leading bank in that city has entered this market with tenders of funds at 5½ per cent. on mixed collateral.

WORK OF JUDGE LANDIS.

All these things affect the financial interests of Chicago. We have to say an event which throws the minds of some of our best citizens into confusion is the appointment by Kenesaw Mountain Landis of his leadership for the district court of Illinois. The career of Judge Landis is known to the whole country, and a withdrawal from all activities by him would be a calamity.

His leadership in that industry and his remarkable acumen in the study of causes that have come before him in court have placed him on a high pedestal among the good citizens of this city.

RACHMANINOFF GIVES FINE PROGRAM AT PIANO RECITAL

Sergi Rachmaninoff, probably the greatest pianist appearing in public today, was given an ovation in Symphony Hall by an audience of music lovers that taxed the capacity of the building. Many students were in the gathering who always delight in hearing this finished Russian artist.

The ovation came at the conclusion of his regular program when he resumed his place at the piano and added his own prelude in C-sharp minor. It was a fitting climax to a good program, another of his own delightful compositions, prelude in B-flat major, having been played just previously.

Three of Chopin's numbers, a waltz, polonaise and barcarolle were among the most tuneful on the program. He also pleasingly played Tausig's transcription of Weber's "Invitation to the Dance." His rendition of Beethoven's "Pathetique" sonata brought forth continued applause.

The other numbers included Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith," Mercer's "Two Fairy Stories," Liszt's "Rhapsodie No. 2" and two other compositions by the player. Rachmaninoff has an assured place in the hearts of Boston music lovers. He will always be welcome here.

NATIONAL PRUNE WEEK TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

National Prune Week will be held throughout the United States and Canada from February 27 to March 4. The week is backed by 11,000 members of the California Prune and Apricot Growers, Inc., the State-wide growers' non-profit co-operative selling association, which claims to handle 61 head per cent. of the entire prune production of the State, growing 55 per cent. of all the prunes eaten in the United States.

The purpose of National Prune Week as proposed by the California growers is to educate the people of the United States and Canada to the healthful, economical and appetizing qualities of California dried prunes. National Prune Week will be brought forth continued attention by the use of extensive newspaper advertising, by thousands of window displays in grocery stores, and through the featuring of prune dishes on the menus of hotels, restaurants, lunch rooms, cafeterias and by the display of prune cakes, pies, rolls and bread by retail bakers.

List of 219 Awards in the Membership Contest, With Highest at $1,000

The chances are that if anybody likely to be attracted by the unparalleled cash offers made by the Boston American in connection with the Famous Titles Test does not get into action by tomorrow he never will become a REAL contestant for the larger awards.

In that view of the case, the list of prizes today is brought to the attention for the last time. They number 219 and have a total value of $5,000. As follows:

First Award	$1,000
For the largest number of New Contestants.
Second Award	750
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Third Award	500
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Fourth Award	400
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Fifth Award	300
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Sixth Award	200
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Seventh Award	150
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Eighth Award	100
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
Ninth Award	50
For the next largest number of New Contestants.
100 Awards of $10 Each	1,000
For the 100 next largest numbers.
110 Awards of $5 Each	550
For the 110 next largest numbers.
Total	$5,000

WHY PRIZES ARE OFFERED.

What are these generous prizes offered for?

For New Contestants for the Famous Titles Test.

And who may compete for them?

Only those who took part in the recent Book Title Test.

"What do you mean by a New Contestant for the Famous Titles Test?"

Any reader of the Boston American—new or old—who did not take part in the Book Title Test.

When will the Famous Titles Test begin?

On Wednesday of next week, the first day of March. On or before that day you must send to the Test Editor, Boston American, No. 30 Summer street, Boston, the names and addresses of FORTY New Contestants. These should be written on Enrollment Blanks.

"Suppose sixty friends tell me that, desiring to help me, they will take part in the Famous Titles Test; but suppose only forty of them go through to the end and send in a list of answers?"

You will be credited with the forty who stick.

PLAN IS UNIQUE.

"Would a score of forty place me among the Nine Leaders in the Membership Competition?"

That question no one can answer. The plan never was tried before. There is nothing to base an answer upon. This is certain! The 219 awards named above will be paid whether the returns are large or small. If forty is the highest number of all, the $1,000 award will be paid for forty New Contestants!

The Famous Titles Test will consist of sixty drawings, each intended to illustrate a Famous Title. One drawing will be printed each day. There will also be a daily List of Titles. In this List will be found the Correct Titles pictured. Contestants are to write a little under each of the sixty drawings and at the close of the Test send them in. The Famous Titles Test will be very much like the Book Title Test. The Test Editor cannot promise that it will be any easier, but it will NOT be more difficult.

Look for Drawing No. 1 of the Famous Titles Test then, on Wednesday of next week. And, if you have enjoyed the Book Test, tell your friends about the new entertainment. Help them in it. Come in yourself, too.

The checking of titles in the Book Test will be completed at Test Headquarters by the end of the present week. When work ended late on Saturday afternoon the highest number of Correct Titles found in any one set was fifty-five.

WINNERS WEEK AFTER NEXT.

Some time next week the Test Editor will begin his calls upon the Nine Leaders and early in the week following you will have the names and addresses of the 219 Book Test winners.

Book Test Editor—

I want to say I enjoyed the Book Test very much and am ready for the next one.

I see where G. M. B., of Newburyport, prefers pictures with "conversations" on them.

For my part I think they are easier when drawn with just enough text on them to give you an idea of what the artist has in mind, like that "Frank and Fearless" one, and the "absinthe" picture, and "Top of the World."

Pictures with a lot of talk in them, as in the Song Title Test, are likely to mislead. They sometimes appear to say one thing and mean another.

Up to date I have eight wrong, but in five cases out of the eight—as in What Was in the Beginning," "Convict Ship," "Marked Man," "The Traveler" and the "Top of the World"—the Correct Titles were my first choices. Why didn't I stick to them? I don't know! I listened to friends. I am fully convinced that it is wise to hold onto the first happy thought.

I have no kick coming. If I had I should kick myself for being stupid. Hope I will do better in the next one. Did you ever think of having a proverb contest?

I have taken part in every contest the Boston American ever had, not only in these three tests of yours, but in others as far back as eight and ten years ago. They are fine fun. I have enjoyed every one of them.

Waltham. S. T. M.

COURAGE IS HIGH.

Dear Editor—

Although I have slipped on some Correct Titles, in many cases my mind changed at the last minute, my courage is high and I shall continue to try until I carry off that thousand. I can hardly wait for the next to begin. The Tests are both interesting and educational and at my house we have lots of fun over them.

I think the Boston American a wonderful paper. I simply could not get along without it. If by chance I don't have time to read it in the evening I must read it the first thing in the morning.

Am working now on the Membership Competition and do make sure of my backers ask them for written guarantees that they will finish the Famous Titles Test. We get three Boston Americans every day and each member of the family will take part.

The only title that has "got my goat" thus far was that "Lady of the Lake."

Hurry along with March 1.

Somerville. M. S. S.

Will E. M. R. of School street, Boston, kindly give the Test Editor his name?

PLANS LAID FOR LEGION 'DAISY DRIVE'

American Legion members throughout the State are completing arrangements for the American Legion's "Daisy Drive," which will be held next Friday and Saturday for the sale of former service men now unemployed.

Final instructions have been issued to commanders of the 276 Legion posts of Massachusetts by Dr. Eugene J. McCarthy, chairman of the drive committee, and on every side the Legion workers are lining up for the signal to go.

Daisies, coin boxes and sashes, which will be worn by the official collectors, have been distributed to every post, and in several cases the post commanders have already sent in for a larger amount.

In the bulletin of instructions issued from State headquarters of the Legion comes the plea that 60 per cent. of the amount raised by each post in the drive will be kept by individual posts. The remaining 40 per cent. will be forwarded to Legion headquarters at the State House and will be disbursed from there. All of the money collected will be used to assist deserving service men who are out of employment.

WOMAN VICTIM OF FIRE CHIEF'S AUTO DEAD

Mrs. Catherine E. Garrity, sixty-two years old, of No. 33 Alaska street, Roxbury, died at the City Hospital from injuries received when she was knocked down and run over by the auto of Fire Chief Sweeney. A warrant for the arrest of Franklin S. Sanborn, the driver, on a charge of manslaughter was to be sought in the Roxbury court.

14,000 BRITISH TROOPS NOW LEFT IN IRELAND

Dublin, Feb. 20.—(By Associated Press)—Fourteen thousand British troops are now left in Ireland, according to a statement by the publicity branch of the Irish Republican army.

Fifty military barracks and 10 police barracks have been taken over by the provisional government.

2 KNIFED IN RAID ON HOSPITAL TO KIDNAP GIRL

Attleboro, Feb. 20. — Mary Sousa, a seventeen-year-old girl patient at the Bristol County Tuberculosis Hospital, is in a precarious condition, her condition under treatment at a local hospital, two hospital attendants are under the care of physicians, and the girl's father and her two brothers are in jail and under the care of City Physician Melo following a battle with jackknives during an attempt to disobey the order of doctors and take the girl home.

Hospital physicians had refused the request of Mr. and Mrs. Sousa to allow their daughter to go home on the ground that the disease she had contracted might be given to others.

Clad only in her bathrobe and slippers the girl was brought into the reception room by two attendants. Without warning the Sousas set upon the attendants, drawing jackknives. Mrs. Sousa broke away from the struggling men, took her daughter under her arm and ran for the woods.

A mile and a half from the hospital, in the woods, the mother and her daughter were found. The girl was shivering from the cold. She was taken back to the tuberculosis hospital and is in a serious condition as the result of exposure.

SURVEY SHOWS ECONOMY IN 3-SHIFT PLANTS

New York, Feb. 20.—A survey of the larger "24-hour industries" in this country, completed by investigators of the American Engineering Council of the Federated American Engineering Society tends to show that American manufacturers are substituting the three-shift day for the two-shift day wherever possible. "Three-shift plants have maintained themselves in the same markets with two-shift plants," the engineers report.

AGED WIDOW BURNED TO DEATH IN HER HOME

Orange, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Luticia K. Cooper, eighty years old, and a widow, was burned to death and Fred M. Ross and his wife were forced to flee when fire destroyed the two-tenement house at No. 102 Mechanic street. Mrs. Cooper lived alone on the first floor and she is believed to have been attempting to start a fire in a stove.

We Gradually Improve—No Snakes

Once Women Liked Them as Ornaments. Not Now

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

"Just for fun" this young lady draped a real snake around her head, in place of a hat. Here you see how it looks. It may give you the shivers, but it need not.

This picture is printed because it shows how we improve slowly in our taste. You see the head and part of the body of a snake in many Egyptian head dresses, modern women never have snakes on their hats. They do occasionally have the heads of small animals, the heads, feet and tail—which is barbarous enough, but not quite as barbarous as snake wearing.

Women don't wear snakes now. Olympias, strange, powerful mother of Alexander the Great, used to dance with living snakes wrapped around her body—and not much else on that body.

Now we wear the furs and skins of animals caught in traps, where they suffer agony, or we dress neatly in beautiful silk, made by boiling alive the poor silkworm that was getting ready to be a butterfly in its cocoon. Don't cry, the silkworm probably hardly feels it.

Once we used to eat each other. Nations that have survived and grown strong, including undoubtedly YOUR OWN, were all cannibals once. For the cannibal family always had meat for the children, and they grew up healthy and husky. Families that were not cannibals went through the Winter half starved, they didn't amount to much.

We no longer eat each other. We have learned to domesticate animals, so we kill and eat them, our unfortunate little brothers. It is necessary, for we haven't the time to digest vegetables. We are too busy.

Later, we shall stop eating our animal brothers, as we have stopped eating each other.

You ask, "WHY ninety-nine women out of a hundred fear a snake?" There are two reasons given, one religious, one scientific.

The religious reason, of course, is the best possible reason. The snake deceived Eve, persuaded her to eat that fatal apple. Since then we have all had to work for a living, whereas we might have lived in the garden, enjoying ourselves, eating everything else EXCEPT the apples.

Perhaps the one woman in a hundred not afraid of snakes remembers with gratitude that if it hadn't been for the snake there would have been no clothes, and woman would have had much less fun, in fact nothing at all to think about.

The scientific explanation of snake fear is as follows:

Our great-great-grandmothers of two or three hundred thousand years ago lived in the forests, up in the trees. They sat at night, holding their babies in their arms. The thing they most feared was the gigantic snakes, crawling from one tree to another along the limbs, and snatching the sleeping, half-human baby from its sleeping mother.

In the daytime the same snake, smaller, was crawling among the grass, and when the woman in the ancient days heard a scream and saw no cause, she was quite sure that the snake had bitten her youngster. That's the scientific explanation.

The third explanation is that woman, being a refined, sensitive creature, abhors everything that is creepy, slimy and crawling—snakes, mice, lizards, octopuses and some kinds of men.

Justice for Mexico

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Citizens of Mexico who attempt to overthrow the existing government by force are warned by President Obregon what to expect.

Execution of three revolutionists after court-martial and the arrest of eight others afford notice that the Mexican executive has decided to be firm.

The pity of it is that while these probable dupes of conspiring American interests meet the fate which society justly prescribes for unsuccessful insurrection, the arch plotters on this side of the border are left free to ensnare new victims.

With revolutions in Mexico originating solely in Mexico the American Government and people could lawfully have nothing to do.

But when indications of American origin are notorious; when proofs of this are proferred to the Congress by responsible persons with a petition for thorough investigation, then inaction by our government takes on a distressing appearance.

In common justice and good neighborliness, not to speak of the material advantages which would ensue to both parties, the Obregon government ought to be recognized by the government of the United States and thus enabled to continue freely its fine work for pacification and progress.

But in any event the hatching of revolutionary conspiracies on American soil against this near neighbor should be stopped summarily.

House Leaders Derelict in Rollcall Avoidance

Public Should Know How Members of Legislature Vote on Important Bills

The way that rollcalls have been avoided in our Massachusetts House of Representatives in the last two years on the most important measures does small credit to the leaders of the House.

We are especially disappointed that this practice should prevail during Mr. B. Loring Young's speakership and while Mr. Shattuck is exercising the influence which he does in the majority councils. We are not very much surprised at the Democrats. They appear to be utterly demoralized, without effective leadership, and playing individual games, usually the game of Dives.

When an important bill, like the Industrial Spy bill, which from every consideration ought to pass, and which is advocated by the best and most disinterested people of the State, cannot get in a House of 240, 30 votes for a rollcall, so that those who opposed the bill may be put on record in order that their constituents may know how they vote, then there is a situation which reflects little credit upon Mr. Young or any of his lieutenants.

The more the pity because we have always regarded Mr. Young as distinctly of the higher order of man than the usual run of Republicans who go to the Legislature. He is not under many of the handicaps which impair the usefulness of so many men in politics, and he always used to exhibit considerable independence of organizations like the Manufacturers' Association.

The trick which prevents the constituents of the members of the Legislature from knowing how they vote on important measures is a poor, mean device for cheating the public and impairing one of the corner-stones of democratic power.

The Boston American intends hereafter to publish the names of gentlemen in the Legislature who do not vote for rollcalls in order that their constituents may not know how they vote. Whenever there is an important measure, these gentlemen may expect to see their names given to their constituents if they do not vote for a rollcall on that measure.

Public Regulation to Stay

In Spite of President Barnum of the Boston Gas Company It Will Continue Until Public Performs Its Own Work

Mr. Dana B. Barnum, president of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, and of the American Gas Association, made rather a defiant speech the other evening at a banquet of the New England Association of Gas Engineers at the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston. Mr. Barnum told us that the time was coming when gas companies ought to be freed from the incubus of public regulation and ought to be allowed to run amuck in performing the necessary public functions of serving us with light and heat.

The newspaper account tells us that Chairman E. C. Guernsey of the Maine Utilities Commission promptly condemned Mr. Barnum's revolutionary suggestion. The newspaper account also tells us that Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the Massachusetts Board of Public Utilities was present, but we cannot find any notice that he, too, replied to Mr. Barnum. The suggestion which Mr. Attwill made, that the public service corporations get the public to buy their securities and thus create a good will for them, is rather a cryptic suggestion. If it conveys good it also conveys evil possibilities.

Mr. Barnum has a good deal to learn, apparently, if he pursues this idea persistently. Among the first things he will learn is that public regulation of those private companies which are performing public service will not cease until the need of such regulation has ceased, when these private companies have passed out of existence and the public function which they are performing none too well is performed by the people themselves through their local, State and national governments.

Michael Collins' Letter

Tells Winston Churchill, With Dignity, That Attempt to Use Border Warfare to Keep Troops in Ireland Would Aid Treaty Opposition

We are very much impressed with the letter which Michael Collins, representing the provisional government in Ireland, has written to Winston Churchill, Secretary for the Colonies. It is like the communications from De Valera and the other Irish leaders, full of dignity, directness and power.

He told Mr. Churchill that the way for Great Britain to keep the treaty was to keep it, that any attempt to use border warfare between Ulster and the rest of Ireland as the excuse for retarding the evacuation of the British troops from Ireland would serve only to strengthen the hands of those who were opposed to the treaty, and to believe that Great Britain was only acting today, as she has always acted in the past, for the purpose of betraying Ireland again.

Mr. Collins pointed out to the British Minister that the road of the provisional leaders was hard enough, because there were so many Irishmen who from experience of history believed these leaders who voted for the treaty were fools to trust England under any circumstances.

Who can doubt that Michael Collins is right? What interpretation would the Irish people put upon the retention of the British army in Ireland after an agreement that it should be taken away merely because there have been a few border kidnapings, in which, at the very best, Ulster is as guilty as Sinn Fein? The suspicion is almost strong enough for a conviction that Ulster is stirring up this disorder as a last desperate measure to keep the British troops in Ireland.

Five Octaves in Singer's Voice

VIENNA, Feb. 20.—A sensation has been caused in Vienna by the remarkable vocal range of a 44-year-old singer, Michael Prita, who made his bow before the Austrian Society of Experimental Phonetics.

He can scale five octaves, a feat never before performed. His deepest note is the F, an octave below the bass staff, more than two octaves below the lowest note of a violin, and one note lower than the record held since the 18th century by the German bass singer, Fischer.

Prita's highest note is the upper A, one note above Mme. Patti's highest.

His bass notes are described as full and perfect, while his soprano notes are equal to those of the famous soprano singer, Moreschi, the soloist at St. Peter's, Rome.

ARE YOU PREPARING FOR OLD AGE?

Supposing your salary were cut five dollars a week, how would you trim your expenses to meet the cut?

You know you would have to reduce expenses if the money were not forthcoming, but you find it impossible to save that much now, each week.

It would be necessary to deny yourself some of the pleasures you now enjoy and you would have to do away with some of the things you now consider necessities.

Why not get in line for retrenchment and save more than you do?

Your salary may not be reduced for some time, but there is necessity for every man to save a certain proportion of his earnings during the time that he can command good wages, for it will be a comparatively short time before his earning capacity is going to wane.

It will require many years of strict saving to provide for old age.

Why not go without some of the luxuries which are rather empty, anyway, and not have to do without the necessities of life later?

Unless you are unusually fortunate you will have to face such a condition, so prepare now to make your later life easier.

DESERTION BY A FATHER ENDS OBLIGATION

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

HER father deserted her when she was seven years old.

Her mother was dead and her father put her in an orphan asylum—and went his own way, living his own life and not worrying about her in the least.

And when she was fourteen she left the asylum and lived with cruel people who were unkind to her, and she suffered terribly, and grew morose and melancholy.

And she was very lonely and very friendless, and sometimes she wondered why she had ever been born.

But one day she met a nice, rosy, young fellow with a pair of laughing eyes, and he told her the world was a fine, friendly place, and he would show her how to live in it and be happy.

They Get Married

So they were married, and they were and are very happy indeed.

They have a nice little home in a nice little town and two of the jolliest, roguest, most affectionate children in the world.

They have lots of friends and they make it their rule never to let a day pass without saying something kind or doing something friendly for someone—even if it's only for the ashman.

They always have strangers to dinner on Thanksgiving—somebody who's lonely and homesick, and every forlorn traveling man who comes to the little town knows where he can find a bright fire and a friendly welcome, when it gets too intolerable in his bleak hotel rooms.

And they're in love with each other yet—these two—though they have been married for over seven years, and sometimes Rose feels—let's call her Rose; it isn't her name, but somehow it ought to be—Rose feels that it must be all a dream and that she will wake up crying and lonely and forsaken—again.

And now, her father has come back.

All around the world he's been, even to India and to Persia. Oh, he's had a fine life of it, careless and fancy free, and now he is getting old and he isn't as well as he was, and his hair is gray.

Remorse is what is eating his heart, he says, and he wants to be friends with his daughter and come to live with her, or near her and make her forget that he ever deserted her at all.

And she doesn't know what to do about it. She does not believe in him very much. Somehow, she can't, but she cannot help loving him a little, too. Something about him makes a kind of appeal to her heart, and yet—what kind of an influence will he be for her growing boys, he with his stories of wild seas and far, romantic lands—he with his careless, good-natured selfishness, and his utter lack of principle or character?

What shall she do?

Take him into her home, or even into her life?

Her husband will not advise her. He says she must make up her own mind, and he will help do whatever she thinks is right.

Well, now, little Rose—if I were you, I'd think awhile before I brought this wanderer and this wastrel into my quiet, well-ordered home.

The Question

If you love him and want him near you, that is your affair, but have you any right to jeopardize the peace and happiness of your little home for the sake of one who didn't care enough for you or for himself to stand by you when you needed him?

Retaliation, punishment? Never think of that, little Rose—you, who are so happy and contented now. It is not your place to punish. Do not embitter your life with hatred or with any plan for revenge of any kind.

Consider first your husband, then your children, then yourself—and after that the selfish weakling who may be only creeping back to you for protection against his own lonely old age.

Letter to the Editor

An Object Lesson.

Editor Boston American:

Since the Sheppard-Towner Act is prominently before the people of Massachusetts, it might be well to learn the experience of other places where similar welfare work has been practically demonstrated.

New York City has cut down its baby death rate from 144 per thousand to 72, mainly through the work of that city's Bureau of Child Hygiene. Public appreciation of the Bureau is shown by the fact that Dr. Josephine Baker has been kept at its head for the past thirteen years, through all changes of administration.

Her work has been of the kind now provided for by the Sheppard-Towner Act. Dr. Baker says that there was tremendous opposition at first to spending any public money to teach mothers how to keep babies well, but this expenditure has been more than justified by the results.
